Facing Feelings in Faith Communities William M. Kondrath, 2013-08-05 Facing Feelings in Faith Communities is based on a simple premise We have emotions because we need them God created us as affectively competent beings William Kondrath argues to help us understand our world and to give appropriate signals to people around us about what we are experiencing When we express our feelings clearly other people can more easily respond in ways that are helpful to us thus enhancing our relationships and the work we might do together Kondrath also recognizes that unfortunately for many of us our emotional software was infected early on with viruses early familial and social conditioning that distorted the way we responded to natural stimuli Because we are underusing or misusing our emotional capacities we are missing out on the opportunity to express our full humanity Fortunately we can re program our emotional software Facing Feelings in Faith Communities helps us restore our emotional systems to their original state or at least invites us to imagine how we would live differently if our emotional expressions were more nearly congruent with the situations and events we encounter Kondrath invites us to explore six feelings fear anger sadness peace power and joy through poetry meditation on an evocative drawing as well as through his own analysis of each feeling Congregational Resources for Facing Feelings is a companion collection to this book For more information click here

Researching with Feeling Caroline Clarke, Mike Broussine, Linda Watts, 2014-10-10 Why should researchers be interested in their feelings and emotions as they carry out research Emotion is what it is to exist to be human and is present in every sphere of our lives All activities are infused with emotion even those that are constructed as rational because rationality and emotionality are interpenetrated and entwined because all thinking is tinged with feeling and all feeling is tinged with thinking This book illuminates the emotional processes of doing social and organizational research and the implications of this for the outcomes of research With contributions from leading academics and research practitioners it addresses the significant issue of the sometimes intense emotional experiences involved in doing research and the implications it has for the theory and practice of social research By examining the nature of feelings and emotions it explores how we might understand researchers emotions and experiences and considers the often powerful feelings encountered in a variety of research contexts Topics discussed include power relations psycho social explanations of researcher emotions paradoxical relations with research participants and the sometimes disturbing data that is gained research supervision the politics of research gender publishing undergoing vivas and presenting at conferences This book will therefore be a valuable companion to researchers and research students from the start of their career onwards
