TRIGGER POINT PAIN PATTERNS – Travell and Simons

Trigger point pain patterns are a common clinical finding in the physical therapist. They are characterized by a localized area of tenderness (the trigger point) that, when palpated, produces a characteristic pattern of pain and referred pain. The pain is often described as a sharp, shooting, or burning pain that radiates from the trigger point to other parts of the body. The pattern of pain is often predictable and can be used to identify the underlying muscle and trigger point. This information is essential for the physical therapist to develop an effective treatment plan.
