The Ethics of Intensification Paul B. Thompson, 2008-09-19 The Ethics of Agricultural Intensification An Interdisciplinary and International Conversation Paul B Thompson and John Otieno Ouko Global agriculture faces a number of challenges as the world approaches the second decade of the third millennium Predictions unilaterally indicate dramatic increases in world population between 2010 and 2030 and a trend in developing countries toward greater consumption of animal products could multiply the need for production of basic grains even further Although global food production in 2000 was estimated to be adequate for the existing population hunger and malnutrition are persistent problems that have led decision makers to recognize that increasing food production in specific regions may be the most effective way to address food security for impoverished peoples At the same time there will need to be policy adjustments that improve poor people's access to current food supplies without simultaneously undercutting the ability of local producers to obtain needed cash income. What is more, the uncertain effects of global climate change on agricultural ecosystems complicate planning for this process while poorly understood processes of globalization create additional unknowns from the side of social systems. In short, despite surpluses in many parts of the developed world, finding ways to increase food production on both selected regional and a total global basis remains a priority for many farmers, policy makers and agricultural researchers.

Sustainable governance and management of food systems Eija Vinnari, Markus Vinnari, 2023-08-07 This book focuses on the role of governance and management in the food chain. These methods are now especially important as the current food system has been found to inflict unsustainable environmental pressures on our planet. These include but are not limited to greenhouse gas emissions, biodiversity loss, excessive water usage and problems with nutrition cycles. In addition, issues such as the treatment of farm animals has attracted considerable media and public attention from the ethical point of view. Therefore, the prominent questions discussed in this book are: What are the most important ethical issues in our fisheries, agriculture and food systems? How should we govern food systems when sustainability is a key goal? What kind of management tools are available for this purpose? Who is responsible for making the agriculture and food system more sustainable?

Second OIE Global Conference on Animal Welfare, 2011 Capacity Building to Implement Good Animal Welfare Practices David G. Fraser, 2009 Animal welfare is recognized as highly relevant to success in international development. It is integral to programmes to improve animal health, to develop livestock productions to respond to natural disasters where animals are involved and to improve the fit between the genetic constitution of animals and the environments in which they are kept. FAO has therefore decided to give more explicit and strategic attention to animal welfare and to guide its activities and has convened this expert meeting. The session was impressively productive and report is of an exceptionally high quality.
