Frank Baum. The Trap. THERE'S a woodchuck over on the side hill that is eating my clover, said Twinkle's father, who was a farmer. Why don't you set a trap for it? asked Twinkle's mother. I believe I will, answered the man. So when the midday dinner was over, the farmer went to the barn and got a steel trap and carried it over to the clover field on the hillside. Twinkle wanted very much to go with him, but she had to help mamma wash the dishes and put them away and then brush up the dining room and put it in order. But when the work was done and she had all the rest of the afternoon to herself, she decided to go over to the woodchuck's hole and see how papa had set the trap and also discover if the woodchuck had yet been caught. So the little girl took her blue and white sun bonnet and climbed over the garden fence and ran across the corn field and through the rye until she came to the red clover patch on the hill. Animals, real and fictional, have been a mainstay in the arts and entertainment, figuring prominently in literature, film, television, social media, and live performances. Increasingly, though, people are anthropomorphizing animals, assigning them humanoid roles, tasks, and identities. At the same time, humans, such as members of the furry culture or college mascots, find pleasure in adopting animal identities and characteristics. This book is the first of its kind to explore these growing phenomena across media. The contributors to this collection represent various disciplines to include the arts, humanities, social sciences, and healthcare. Their essays demonstrate the various ways that human and animal lives are intertwined and constantly evolving
