Morphology-Semantics Mismatches and the Nature of Grammatical Features Peter W. Smith, 2021-04-19 Hybrid nouns have a morphological shape that doesn't match their semantic interpretation Such nouns pose clear and interesting questions for the nature of grammatical features For instance how does a single feature contribute distinct information values to different components of the grammar Furthermore what does this observation reveal about the syntax often taken to mediate between the morphology and the semantics This book studies hybrid nouns and argues that a single grammatical feature is comprised of two halves a semantic half and a morphological half that coexist in the syntax before being sent to the respective interfaces Viewing features in this way allows us a new look at numerous types of hybrid nouns such as Imposter constructions nouns of collection as well as nouns like furniture that straddle the mass count distinction Moreover the study of the agreement patterns of hybrid nouns shows that semantic features behave differently to morphological features under agreement providing a novel insight into the nature of the mechanism that underlies morphosyntactic agreement

Gender Acquisition in Spanish Jessica Diebowski, 2021-04-06 The comparative investigation of the acquisition of gender in Spanish by early and late bilinguals of different language combinations is highly debated and crucial as the phenomenon of gender involves grammatical features that differ in all three languages under investigation Against this background both early and late bilinguals face an arduous learning task which differs in complexity Couched within a generative framework the empirical study focuses on 257 participants with different levels of proficiency in Spanish ranging from low to advanced and through a series of tests aims to discover which extra linguistic and intra linguistic factors act as triggers for non native outcomes in adult heritage speakers and L2 learners The observed morphological variability is argued not to stem from a representational i e syntactic deficit but rather from a mapping problem in L2 learners and heritage speakers Successful attainment in terms of gender is possible but dependent on the interplay between various extralinguistic and linguistic factors
