Urbanism In The Age Of Climate Change:

Urbanism in the Age of Climate Change Peter Calthorpe, 2013-10-21 Eco-urbanism in the Age of Climate Change Robin Croen, 2017 This thesis seeks to examine the intersection of urbanization and climate change and asks how design can play a part in developing sustainable healthy vibrant and adaptive cities More specifically it asks How do we design for growing urban landscapes that are threatened by climate change The city of Sacramento California is a relevant study site for this topic as it is currently experiencing a new era of growth and development while concurrently being threatened by intensifying weather extremes The project focuses on the adaptive reuse of a freight railroad track that cuts through the Midtown neighborhood of Sacramento and proposes re imagining this space as a pedestrian focused promenade layered on top of and integrated with functional urban stormwater infrastructure The project also examines the existing spatial hierarchies of the city s right of way adjacent to the project site and suggests strategies for reallocating space to prioritize interactions activities and designs that make for better urban life in addition to overlaying a network of climate adaptive strategies A survey of relevant literature and precedent projects serves as the theoretical grounding for the design framework and proposed implementations Ultimately the goal of this project is to create a scalable set of strategies that address the thesis question and adhere to the tenets of the framework and apply them to the study site as a neighborhood scale pilot Strategies for scaling the project up to a regional scale and down to an individual scale are examined with the intent to use this project as a catalyst for lasting positive change on the region its inhabitants and other urban environments both local and far afield Urbanism in the Age of Climate Change Peter Calthorpe, 2010-12-20 Cities are green is becoming a common refrain But Calthorpe argues that a more comprehensive understanding of urbanism at the regional scale provides a better platform to address climate change In this groundbreaking new work he shows how such regionally scaled urbanism can be combined with green technology to achieve not only needed reductions in carbon emissions but other critical economies and lifestyle benefits Rather than just providing another checklist of new energy sources or one dimensional land use alternatives he combines them into comprehensive national growth scenarios for 2050 and documents their potential impacts In so doing he powerfully demonstrates that it will take an integrated approach of land use transformation policy changes and innovative technology to transition to a low carbon economy To accomplish this Calthorpe synthesizes thirty years of experience starting with his ground breaking work in sustainable community design in the 1980s following through to his current leadership in transit oriented design regional planning and land use policy Peter Calthorpe shows us what is possible using real world examples of innovative design strategies and forward thinking policies that are already changing the way we live This provocative and engaging work emerges from Calthorpe s belief that just as the last fifty years produced massive changes in our culture economy and environment the next fifty will generate changes of an even more profound nature The book enhanced by its superb four color graphics is a call to action and a road map for moving forward The City Reader Richard T. LeGates, Richard T. Legates, Frederic Stout, Roger W. Caves, 2020-05-14 The seventh edition of the highly successful The City Reader juxtaposes the very best classic and contemporary writings on the city. Sixty-three selections are included: forty-five from the sixth edition and eighteen new selections, including three newly written exclusively for The City Reader. The anthology features a Prologue essay on How to Study Cities, eight part introductions as well as individual introductions to each of the selected articles. The new edition has been extensively updated and expanded to reflect the latest thinking in each of the disciplinary and topical areas included, such as sustainable urban development, globalization, the impact of technology on cities, resilient cities, and urban theory. The seventh edition places greater emphasis on cities in the developing world, the global city system, and the future of cities in the digital transformation age. While retaining classic writings from authors such as Lewis Mumford, Jane Jacobs, and Louis Wirth, this edition also includes the best contemporary writings of, among others, Peter Hall, Manuel Castells, and Saskia Sassen. New material has been added on compact cities, urban history, placemaking, climate change, the world city network, smart cities, the new social exclusion, ordinary cities, gentrification, gender perspectives, regime theory, comparative urbanization, and the impact of technology on cities.

Bibliographic material has been completely updated and strengthened so that the seventh edition can serve as a reference volume orienting faculty and students to the most important writings of all the key topics in urban studies and planning. The City Reader provides the comprehensive mapping of the terrain of Urban Studies, old and new. It is essential reading for anyone interested in studying cities and city life.

Transcultural Ecocriticism Stuart Cooke, Peter Denney, 2021-01-28 Bringing together decolonial, Romantic, and global literature perspectives, Transcultural Ecocriticism explores innovative new directions for the field of environmental literary studies. By examining these literatures across a range of geographical locations and historical periods, from the Romantic period to travel writing, to Chinese science fiction, and Aboriginal Australian poetry, the book makes a compelling case for the need for ecocriticism to competently translate between Indigenous and non-Indigenous, planetary and local, and contemporary and pre-modern perspectives. Leading scholars from Australasia and North America explore links between Indigenous knowledges, Romanticism, globalisation, avant-garde poetics, and critical theory in order to chart tensions as well as affinities between these discourses in a variety of genres of environmental representation, including science fiction, poetry, colonial natural history, and oral narrative.

The Oglethorpe Plan Thomas D. Wilson, 2015-02-12 The statesman and reformer James Oglethorpe was a significant figure in the philosophical and political landscape of eighteenth-century British America. His social contributions, all informed by Enlightenment ideals, included prison reform, the founding of the Georgia Colony on behalf of the worthy poor, and stirring the founders of the abolitionist movement. He also developed the famous ward design for the city of Savannah, a design that became one of the most important planning innovations in American history. Multilayered and connecting the urban core to peripheral garden and farm lots, the Oglethorpe Plan was intended by its author to both exhibit and foster his utopian ideas of agrarian equality. In his new book the professional planner Thomas D Wilson reconsiders the Oglethorpe Plan revealing that Oglethorpe was a more dynamic force in urban planning than has generally been supposed In essence claims Wilson the Oglethorpe Plan offers a portrait of the Enlightenment and embodies all of the major themes of that era including science humanism and secularism The vibrancy of the ideas behind its conception invites an exploration of the plan s enduring qualities In addition to surveying historical context and intellectual origins this book aims to rescue Oglethorpe s work from its relegation to the status of a living museum in a revered historic district and to demonstrate instead how modern day town planners might employ its principles Unique in its exclusive focus on the topic and written in a clear and readable style The Oglethorpe Plan explores this design as a bridge between New Urbanism and other more naturally evolving and socially engaged modes of urban development
