Carbon dioxide removal: Perspectives from the social sciences and humanities

Anders Hansson, Mathias Fridahl, Miranda Boettcher, Shinichiro Asayama, 2024-07-09. Carbon dioxide removal (CDR) approaches are becoming increasingly central to visions of decarbonizing national economies. The past few years have seen an increasing number of countries committed to net zero targets preceded by a surge of modelled 1.5°C scenarios envisioning large scale future CDR deployment. The prospect of CDR deployment raises new complex socio-ecological challenges and presents new deep uncertainties. These complexities, challenges and uncertainties cannot be investigated using solely the techno-economic modelling and environmental risk assessment methods that currently dominate the construction of policy relevant knowledge on CDR. Social sciences and the humanities perspectives on CDR are often restricted to instrumental tasks such as investigating public acceptance, overcoming social resistance or supporting the development of integrated assessment models. There is a need for more diverse investigations of CDR which include not only environmental and techno-economic dimensions but also explore key societal complexities, challenges and uncertainties. Against this backdrop we call for submissions on CDR stemming from perspectives within the social sciences and humanities. We encourage novel empirical and theoretical contributions on CDR related policy design or analyses of recent policy developments at sub-national, national and international levels of governance e.g. in context of climate targets and strategies, climate tipping points, mitigation, deterrence or societal transformations.

Transforming Research Methods in the Social Sciences Angelo Flynn, Sherianne Kramer, 2019-03-01. A look at the research methods in development across the global South. Social science researchers in the global South and in South Africa particularly utilise research methods in innovative ways in order to respond to contexts characterised by diversity, racial and political tensions, socioeconomic disparities and gender inequalities. These methods often remain undocumented, a gap that this book starts to address. Written by experts from various methodological fields, Transforming Research Methods in the Social Sciences is a comprehensive collation of original essays and cutting edge research that demonstrates the variety of novel techniques and research methods available to researchers responding to these context bound issues It is particularly relevant for study and research in the fields of applied psychology sociology ethnography biography and anthropology In addition to their unique combination of conceptual and application issues the chapters also include discussions on ethical considerations relevant to the method in similar global South contexts Transforming Research Methods in the Social Sciences has much to offer to researchers professionals and others involved in social science research both locally and internationally Social Science Perspectives on Global Public Health Vincent La Placa, Julia Morgan, 2022-09-30 Approaching global health through a social justice lens this text explores both established and emerging issues for contemporary health and wellbeing Divided into two parts the book introduces key concepts in relation to global public health such as ethics economics health disparities and globalisation The second part comprises chapters exploring specific challenges such as designing and implementing public health interventions the role of social enterprise climate change sustainability and health oral health violence palliative care mental health loneliness nutrition and embracing diverse genders These chapters build on and apply the theoretical frameworks laid out in part one linking the substantive content to broader contexts Taking an inclusive global approach this is a key text for both undergraduate and postgraduate students of global health public health and medical sociology
