Optical Connection

The diagram illustrates the optical connection between a base station and a monitor. A cable connects the base station to the monitor. The base station has a power button and a power indicator light. The monitor has a power button and a power indicator light. The diagram is titled "Optical Connection".

Network Connection

The diagram illustrates two network connection methods for a Raspberry Pi:

- Wired Connection: A Raspberry Pi is connected to a wireless router via an Ethernet cable. The router is also connected to a laptop via an Ethernet cable.
- Wireless Connection: A Raspberry Pi is connected to a wireless router via Wi-Fi. The router is also connected to a laptop via Wi-Fi.

Below the diagram, there are several text boxes providing additional information:

- Wired Connection: This method is recommended for a stable and fast connection. It requires an Ethernet cable to connect the Raspberry Pi to the router.
- Wireless Connection: This method is convenient but may be less stable than a wired connection. It requires the Raspberry Pi to have a wireless network interface card (NIC) and the router to be configured for wireless access.
- Router Configuration: The router must be configured to allow the Raspberry Pi to access the internet. This typically involves setting up a DHCP reservation for the Raspberry Pi's MAC address.
- Firewall Settings: The router's firewall should be configured to allow traffic to and from the Raspberry Pi.
- Network Name (SSID): The wireless network should have a unique name (SSID) to avoid conflicts with other networks.
- Security: The wireless network should be secured with a strong password to prevent unauthorized access.
