Westward Expansion in the United States

Read the passage.

Answer the questions that follow.

In the United States, people moved westward to claim and move their families and land for more.

People started to move westward.

By 1847, nearly the entire United States territory belonged to the U.S. government. The last piece of land was acquired in 1848 when the U.S. took over the remaining land in the New Mexico

Territory after the Mexican American War.

Once the land acquisitions were complete, the United States government had to encourage settlers to move into the frontier territories. Cities were overcrowded, and there was no room for more people. Many people were afraid to move out west.

Cities were not sure if they would be able to make the journey and start new lives in western territory.

To get people to move, the U.S. government passed the Homestead Act. This act provided free land to any citizen willing to move out west and farm the land for five years. The act allowed only people to build homes and own property when they had never had that option before.
