Tuberous Sclerosis Complex Developmental Perspectives In Psychiatry:

Tuberous Sclerosis Complex Manuel Rodriguez Gomez, Julian R. Sampson, Vicky Holets Whittemore, 1999-07-15 Tuberous Sclerosis is a genetic disease characterized by lesions of the skin and central nervous system seizures and sometimes severe mental retardation. Infants with this disease may appear overactive, autistic or socially impaired. Because tuberous sclerosis involves abnormal cellular differentiation, aberrant neuronal migration and excessive cell proliferation, this thoroughly revised edition will be of interest to a wide range of professionals involved in the study of biological mechanisms underlying many genetically determined neurological disorders. Outcomes in Neurodevelopmental and Genetic Disorders Patricia Howlin, Orlee Udwin, 2002-07-25 Edited by two leading authorities and written by a team of international experts in the field, this book describes the causes, course and treatment of a variety of developmental and genetic disorders including attention deficit disorder, fragile X syndrome and the autistic spectrum disorders. There is a particular focus on the course of disorders over time and outcome in adulthood. Outcome is an area often overlooked in other books about developmental disorders but is an issue of great importance to parents and carers and one that has important implications for education, health, social and employment services. As well as providing succinct and up to date summaries of the most recent research, the authors give clinicians practical guidelines for intervention and management with children and young adults. This book is essential reading for clinicians and psychologists and anyone working with or caring for children with special educational needs. Pediatric Neurology, Part I Olivier Dulac, Maryse Lassonde, Harvey B. Sarnat, 2013-04-24 The child is neither an adult miniature nor an immature human being. At each age it expresses specific abilities that optimize adaptation to its environment and development of new acquisitions. Diseases in children cover all specialties encountered in adulthood and neurology involves a particularly large area ranging from the brain to the striated muscle, the generation and functioning of which require half the genes of the whole genome and a majority of mitochondrial ones. Human being nervous system is sensitive to prenatal aggression; is particularly immature at birth and development may be affected by a whole range of age dependent disorders distinct from those that occur in adults. Even diseases more often encountered in adulthood than childhood may have specific expression in the developing nervous system. The course of chronic neurological diseases beginning before adolescence remains distinct from that of adult pathology not only from the cognitive but also motor perspective right into adulthood and a whole area is developing for adult neurologists to care for these children with persisting neurological diseases when they become adults. Just as pediatric neurology evolved as an identified specialty as the volume and complexity of data became too much for the general pediatrician or the adult neurologist to master, the discipline has now continued to evolve into so many subspecialties such as epilepsy, neuromuscular disease, stroke, malformations, neonatal neurology, metabolic diseases etc. that the general pediatric neurologist no longer can reasonably possess in depth expertise in all areas, particularly in dealing with complex cases. Subspecialty expertise thus is provided to some trainees through fellowship programmes following a general pediatric neurology residency and many of these fellowships include training in research Since the infectious context the genetic background and medical practice vary throughout the world this diversity needs to be represented in a pediatric neurology textbook Taken together and although brain malformations H Sarnat P Curatolo 2007 and oncology W Grisold R Soffietti are covered in detail in other volumes of the same series and therefore only briefly addressed here these considerations justify the number of volumes and the number of authors who contributed from all over the world Experts in the different subspecialties also contributed to design the general framework and contents of the book Special emphasis is given to the developmental aspect and normal development is reminded whenever needed brain muscle and the immune system The course of chronic diseases into adulthood and ethical issues specific to the developing nervous system are also addressed A volume in the Handbook of Clinical Neurology series which has an unparalleled reputation as the world's most comprehensive source of information in neurology International list of contributors including the leading workers in the field Describes the advances which have occurred in clinical neurology and the neurosciences their impact on the understanding of neurological disorders and on patient care Pediatric Neurology Part I P. Curatolo, B.L. Maria, 2013-04-24

Tuberous sclerosis complex TSC is a genetic multisystem disorder characterized by widespread hamartomas in several organs including the brain heart skin eyes kidney lung and liver The affected genes are TSC1 and TSC2 encoding hamartin and tuberin respectively The hamartin tuberin complex inhibits the mammalian target of Rapamycin mTOR pathway which controls cell growth and proliferation Variations in the distribution number size and location of lesions cause the clinical syndrome to vary even between relatives About 85% of children and adolescents with TSC have CNS complications including epilepsy cognitive impairment challenging behavioral problems and autism like symptoms Epilepsy generally begins during the first year of life with focal seizures and spasms The discovery of the mTOR pathway upregulation in TSC associated lesions presents new possibilities for treatment strategy Increasing understanding of the molecular abnormalities caused by TSC may enable improved management of the disease Swaiman's Pediatric Neurology E-Book Kenneth F.
