This book examines several epistemological regimes in studies of numerical data over the last four centuries It distinguishes these regimes and mobilises questions present in the philosophy of science sociology and historical works throughout the 20th century Attention is given to the skills of scholars and their methods their assumptions and the socio historical conditions that made calculations and their interpretations possible In doing so questions posed as early as mile Durkheim s and Ernst Cassirer s ones are revisited and the concept of symbolic form is put to the test in this particular survey conducted over long period of time Although distinct from a methodological and epistemological point of view today these regimes may be found together in the toolbox of statisticians and those who comment on their conclusions As such the book is addressed
