ABSTRACT

Adaptation of therapeutic communities (TCs) for new clients and in different settings has resulted in a diversity of programs with unique treatment protocols and different planned duration of stays. The extent to which the various adaptations retain the essential elements of the TC model is not known, and moreover, casts questions about the general effectiveness of the therapeutic community modality. This paper outlines a theoretical framework of the addiction TC to advance research and guide training, practice, and program development. The essential elements of the TC are organized into four areas: its perspective, treatment approach, program model, and the treatment process. Some implications of a TC theory, model, and method are discussed in terms of research, treatment, and policy issues.

Addiction Treatment Daniel Hood, 2017-09-08 Addiction Treatment is an ethnography that compares two types of residential drug free treatment programs religious faith based programs and science based secular programs Although these programs have originated from significantly different ideological bases in examining the day to day operations of each Daniel E Hood concludes that they are far more alike than they are different Drug free treatment today whether in secular or religious form is little more than a remnant of the temperance movement It is a warning to stop using drugs At its best treatment provides practical advice and support for complete abstinence At its worst it demeans users for a form of behavior that is not well understood and threatens death if they do not stop Hood argues that there is no universal agreement on what addiction is and that drug abuse is little more than a catch all term of no specific meaning used to condemn behavior that is socially unacceptable Through extensive participatory observations intimate life history interviews and informal conversations with residents and staff Hood shows how both programs use the same basic techniques of ideological persuasion mutual witnessing methods of social control discourse deprivation and the same proposed zero tolerance abstinent lifestyle Christian living vs Right living as they endeavor to transform clients from addicts to citizens or from sinners to disciples      Alcoholism Marc Galanter, 2008-04-08 From the President of the Research Society on Alcoholism On behalf of the Research Society on Alcoholism I welcome the important contribution that Volume 15 of this excellent series on Recent Developments in Alcoholism brings to our field It is not enough for our scientists to develop effective and efficient methods to identify and treat alcohol abuse and alcohol dependence the availability of these services is often limited and it is
