In the wake of a 1952 revolution leaders of Bolivia's National Revolutionary Movement MNR embarked on a program of internal colonization known as the March to the East In an impoverished country dependent on highland mining the MNR sought to convert the nation's vast undeveloped Amazonian frontier into farmland hoping to achieve food security territorial integrity and demographic balance To do so they encouraged hundreds of thousands of Indigenous Bolivians to relocate from the overcrowded Andes to the tropical lowlands but also welcomed surprising transnational migrant streams including horse and buggy Mennonites from Mexico and displaced Okinawans from across the Pacific Ben Nobbs Thiessen details the multifaceted results of these migrations on the environment of the South American interior As he reveals one of the migrants with the greatest impact was the soybean which Bolivia embraced as a profitable cash crop while eschewing earlier goals of food security creating a new model for extractive export agriculture Half a century of colonization would transform the small regional capital of Santa Cruz de la Sierra into Bolivia's largest city and the diverging stories of Andean Mennonite and Okinawan migrants complicate our
