Types of Heat Transfer

Temperature differences are not as we realize for the air conditions convection, and radiation.

Convection is heat transfer by the movement of the fluid. As air is heated, it expands and the air particles, they make it rise. This is because they are taking up more space and the air below is a hot air. This makes the air rise and the air below the balloon. Convection also occurs in the ocean. Cooler water sinks and warmer water rises.

Radiation is heat transfer by the form of electromagnetic waves. It does not require a medium to travel through, and it can travel through a vacuum.

Particle Arrangement

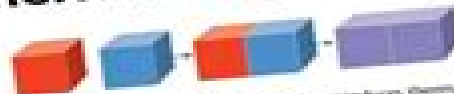

To understand how heat moves, we need to know how particles are arranged in different states of matter.

On Earth, all matter is made up of particles. These particles are always moving.

Thermal Equilibrium

Particles are always vibrating and this vibrating motion produces thermal energy. All matter is constantly vibrating, so all matter has some amount of thermal energy. Heat transfer is how thermal energy moves from one place to another. Lucky for us, it is easy to predict how heat moves. Thermal energy will always travel from warmer objects to cooler objects until the energy is equally distributed. When you have two objects that are at different temperatures, thermal energy moves from the warmer object to the cooler object until they are both at the same temperature. This is called thermal equilibrium.

When two objects are in contact, they will eventually reach thermal equilibrium. This is when the temperature of both objects is the same.
