Us Army Security Cooperation Toward Improved Planning And Management:

U.S. Army Security Cooperation Thomas S. Szayna, 2004 In the realm of security cooperation peacetime activities undertaken by the U S armed services with other armed forces and countries the U S Army s current planning process is exceedingly complex and difficult to coordinate control and measure This monograph seeks to help the U S Army improve its ability to assess future demand for resources devoted to security cooperation and to evaluate the impact of these demands upon the resources available to the Army U.S. Army Security Cooperation: Toward Improved Planning and Management, 2004 This monograph documents the results of a project entitled Army Capabilities to Respond to Future Engagement Requirements The project aimed to improve the Army s decisionmaking and prioritization of resources devoted to security cooperation The research reported here was sponsored by the Deputy Under Secretary of the Army International Affairs Toward the end of the project s duration that office was disestablished and its functions split up and merged into the Office of the Assistant Secretary of the Army Acquisition Logistics and Technology and the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff G 3 Operations and Plans Headquarters Department of the Army The research was conducted in RAND Arroyo Center s Strategy Doctrine and Resources Program RAND Arroyo Center part of the RAND Corporation is a federally funded research and development center sponsored by the United States Army The report should be of interest to those concerned with security cooperation and Army international activities Air Power in the New Counterinsurgency Era Alan Vick, 2006 United States has engaged in counterinsurgency around the globe for more than a century But insurgencies have rarely been defeated by outside powers Rather the afflicted nation itself must win the war politically and militarily and the best way to help is to offer advice training and equipment Air power and the U S Air Force can play an important role in such efforts which suggests making them an institutional priority After Two Wars: Reflections on the American Strategic Revolution in Central Asia, 2005 Since September 11 2001 the United States has fought two wars in Iraq and Afghanistan In these wars the United States has accomplished or more precisely revealed a strategic revolution Most notably U S led coalitions sustained forces in Central Asia and the Caucasus over an extended period by sea and air for the rst time in history Thus American leaders and commanders revealed that the new military capabilities hitherto associated with the Revolution in Military Affairs RMA could be deployed anywhere in the world that U S forces would and could be optimized for global power projection capabilities and that new theaters like Central Asia were of considerable strategic importance to Washington Their actions rejected a parallel to the ongoing Revolution in Strategic Affairs RSA that reformed the importance of that area as a potential theater of strategic operations a term taken originally from Soviet military thought Building Partner Capabilities for Coalition Operations Jennifer D. P. Moroney, Nancy E. Blacker, Renee Buhr, James McFadden, Cathryn Quantic Thurston, 2007-07-03 Ongoing operations and emerging mission requirements place a heavy burden on Army resources resulting in capability gaps that the Army is unable to fill by itself One solution is to build the appropriate capabilities in allies and partner armies through focused security cooperation To do this Army planners need a more comprehensive understanding of the capability gaps and a process for matching those gaps with candidate partner armies Building Militaries in Fragile States Mara E. Karlin,2018-01-19 With a rich comparative case study approach that spans Europe Asia and the Middle East Building Militaries in Fragile States unearths provocative findings that suggest the traditional way of working with foreign militaries needs to be rethought Short of General War :. ,2010 Short of General War Harry Richard Yarger,Army War College (U.S.).
