

It is to be remembered that media stress the fact that the American, noncommunist-oriented, air campaign of the early 1950s and 1960s was for international, not local, communist suppression. It is interesting to observe that the two American anti-communist groups, just as the Soviet "peace and democracy" advocates, in the 1950s and '60s, were neither very active nor very vocal. It is as if it were the Russian or Chinese, or perhaps the American, communists, in the 1950s and '60s, who were the main actors in the international arena of anti-communist activity in Asia, Europe, and Africa.
