Wind In The Pages Haiku:

Wind in the Pages Brett Brady, 2008-01-21 implicit succinct pithy to the point though elegantly indirect curiously multi layered like life they invite ambiguity suggest the narrative and intuit truth they are haiku There are 371 of these gemlike offerings each shining in a shadowy stir of silences Given ample space one page one haiku every poem is a pebble casually tossed into a still pond of the reader's memory embrace the event as a personal pronouncement and you are instantly plucked in and swooped up refreshingly freed to follow and fully consider wherever the ripples might carry They aren't sectioned off into seasonal groupings nor partitioned into elements of kind such as metals or stone or wood or fire etc Unadorned unpretentious quietly presented these small subtle epiphanies are weightless and seem to come and go from out of nowhere Unsuspectingly soothing or even healing as if by magic though more by nature each now moment will inexplicably materialize in a sudden clearburst of enlightenment and understanding and once the touch is felt just as mysteriously wink out or softly fade and disappear all in a sort of musical ebb and flow of emotional rhythms Read this book at a single sitting or try a lifetime of picking indiscriminately at random among the sundry bits and pieces leisurely resting at large throughout These little snippets of clarity are life songs evocatively calling to be heard and or sung again Reconnect with the lost haunting refrains of your own circus hypnotica and trivia mystique Visit and revisit any one of these surprisingly familiar and enigmatically commonplace experiences always gently inviting an old discovery to open into some new exploration Awaken to a sweet absorbing allure of something unexpectedly authentic Breathe haiku notes life songs Haiku slips beneath our immediate consciousness and plants a moment of fidelity and perpetual agreement with an eternal integral truth about something quite ordinary they tender through delicacy and nuance an extraordinarily unanimous harmony with everything Haiku and senryu are miniature poems that give expression in simple language to fleeting moments of heightened awareness They suggest rather than narrate They can appear fragile but are in fact substantially robust and resilient They may seem elusive yet there is an ever present constant an irrepressible hint of something other which remains doggedly attentive quietly subtle and infinitely far ranging meditative nuance It seems haiku as a poetic composition is better considered a visual art than a verbal one Profound in essence intuitive by proxy or inference direct brief bare and blunt these are or should be benchmarks for every haiku more literal than literary sensuous and visceral as opposed to intellectual and academic touch first think later Haiku is a simple clear eyed compositional meditative state and a way of life which needs no distracting bejeweled finger pointing to the moon in order to better see the moon to borrow and twist a famous metaphor Inspiration is everywhere always available totally accessible A little reach and there it is If we learn how to look we may see if how to see we become visionary if we are visionaries well so forth and so on that which is is enough focus wide be aware brett brady Haiku show us what we knew all the time but did not know we knew it shows us that we are poets in so far as we live at all r h blyth
