Nevertheless the aim of this chapter will not be a comparative approach of the ancient pretext as a basis for the modern novel How have Western influences and elements of globalization been interwoven in the narration And how do these contribute to rewriting The result will be drawn on to answer these questions of the significance of rewriting and relocating for the concept of cultural identity The purpose of this comparison is to clarify the major differences and similarities which is a prerequisite of the contextualization of the concept of identity in postcolonialism as will be done in the conclusion
