Historicizing Self-Interest in the Modern Atlantic World Christine Zabel, 2021-03-15 This volume historicizes the use of the notion of self interest that at least since Bernard de Mandeville and Adam Smith's theories is considered a central component of economic theory Having in the twentieth century become one of the key features of rational choice models and thus is seen as an idealized trait of human behavior self interest has despite Albert O Hirschman's pivotal analysis of self interest only marginally been historicized A historicization of self interest however offers new insights into the concept by asking why when for what reason and in which contexts the notion was discussed or referred to how it was employed by contemporaries and how the different usages developed and changed over time This helps us to appreciate the various transformations in the perception of the notion and also to explore how and in what ways different people at different times and in different regions reflected on or realized the act of considering what was in their best interest The volume focuses on those different usages knowledges and practices concerned with self interest in the modern Atlantic World from the seventeenth to twentieth centuries by using different approaches including political and economic theory actuarial science anthropology or the history of emotions Offering a new perspective on a key component of Western capitalism this is the ideal resource for researches and scholars of intellectual political and economic history in the modern Atlantic World

Headstrong and Unorthodox Pioneers for a Critical Theory of Consumption Michael-Burkhard Piorkowsky, Karl Kollmann, 2023-08-28 This volume offers contributions on the fundamentals of current consumption theory and consumption research which have developed almost entirely from originally unorthodox approaches against traditional micro and macroeconomic theory The inspiration came mainly from social economic behavioural research and ecological economics But the reception is very patchy and the history is largely forgotten With reference to the work of earlier authors new arguments are offered to the current discussion about delimitations and paradoxes in consumption and the still narrowly understood consumer role It is as much about rework in sharpening the understanding of consumption and consumers in their lifeworlds as it is about indications of fruitfulness for the analysis of open questions It is about arguments for a paradigmatic reorientation of consumer research and policy The contributions address in particular ambivalences options and future modes in consumption in the search for individual satisfaction and ecological sustainability This book is a translation of an original German edition The translation was done with the help of artificial intelligence machine translation by the service DeepL com A subsequent human revision was done primarily in terms of content so that the book will read stylistically differently from a conventional translation

Bazargan, Samuel C. Rickless, 2017-01-23 Just War theory as it was developed by the Catholic theologians of medieval Europe and the jurists of the Renaissance is a framework for the moral and legal evaluation of armed conflicts To this day Just War theory informs the judgments of ethicists government officials international lawyers religious scholars news coverage and perhaps most importantly the public as a whole The influence of Just War theory is as vast as it is subtle we have been socialized into evaluating wars largely according to the principles of this medieval theory which according to the eminent philosopher David Rodin is one of the few basic fixtures of medieval philosophy to remain substantially unchallenged in the modern world Some of the most basic assumptions of Just War Theory have been dismantled in a barrage of criticism and analysis in the first dozen years of the 21st century The Ethics of War continues and pushes past this trend This anthology is an authoritative treatment of the ethics and law of war by both the eminent scholars who first challenged the orthodoxy of Just War theory as well as by new thinkers The twelve original essays span both foundational and topical issues in the ethics of war including an investigation of whether there is a greater good obligation that parallels the canonical lesser evil justification in war the conditions under which citizens can wage war against their own government whether there is a limit to the number of combatants on the unjust side who can be permissibly killed whether the justice of the cause for which combatants fight affects the moral permissibility of fighting whether duress ever justifies killing in war the role that collective liability plays in the ethics of war whether targeted killing is morally and legally permissible the morality of legal prohibitions on the use of indiscriminate weapons the justification for the legal distinction between directly and indirectly harming civilians whether human rights of unjust combatants are more prohibitive than have been thought the moral repair of combatants suffering from PTSD and the moral categories and criteria needed to understand the proper justification for ending war
