News As Discourse Teun A. van Dijk, 2013-10-28 First Published in 1990 This book presents a new interdisciplinary theory of news in the press Against the background of developments in discourse analysis it is argued that news should be studied primarily as a form of public discourse Whereas in much mass communication research the economic social or cultural dimensions of news and news media are addressed the present study emphasizes the importance of an explicit structural analysis of news reports Such an analysis should provide a qualitative alternative to traditional methods of content analysis Also attention is paid to processes of news production by journalists and news comprehension by readers in terms of the social cognitions of news participants In this way news structures can also be explicitly linked to social practices and ideologies of news making and indirectly to the institutional and macro sociological contexts of the news media abundance and ease of access Drawing on interviews in Spain the United Kingdom and the United States as well as extensive survey data Avoiding the News examines how people who tune out traditional media get information and explores their folk theories about how news organizations work The authors argue that news avoidance is about not only content but also identity ideologies and infrastructures who people are what they believe and how news does or does not fit into their everyday lives Because news avoidance is most common among disadvantaged groups it threatens to exacerbate existing inequalities by tilting mainstream journalism even further toward privileged audiences Ultimately this book shows persuading news averse audiences of the value of journalism is not simply a matter of adjusting coverage but requires a deeper more empathetic understanding of people's relationships with news across social political and technological boundaries
