Buddhist Christianity Ross Thompson, 2010-08-27

It is possible to be a Christian Buddhist in the context of a universal belief that sits fairly lightly on both traditions Ross Thompson takes especially seriously the aspects of each faith that seem incompatible with the other no God and no soul in Buddhism for example and the need for grace and the historical atonement on the cross in Christianity Buddhist Christianity can be no bland blend of the tamer aspects of both faiths but must result from a wrestling of the seeming incompatibles allowing each faith to shake the other to its very foundations The author traces his personal journey through which his need for both faiths became painfully apparent He explores the Buddha and Jesus through their teachings and the varied communities that flow from them investigating their different understandings of suffering and wrong self and liberation meditation and prayer cosmology and God or not He concludes with a bold commitment to both faiths

Jesus Christ, Zen Master Matthew Barnes, 2020-07-02

Jesus Christ was a Zen master In at least one version of early Christian belief he sure sounded like one Early Christianity was far from the gentle and unified belief system that we have been led to believe it was In fact in the earliest stages of its development interpretations of the meanings of Jesus teachings varied widely were hotly debated and differing views were not tolerated well at all The Jesus narrative that eventually won out was passed on to future generations while the losers had their books burned and adherents imprisoned tortured or put to death Talk about issues with freedom of religion Luckily an early Christian group called the Gnostics in seeing their beloved books burned and adherents mistreated buried their most important works in hopes of future discovery These works were discovered in Nag Hammadi Egypt in 1945 and have shed quite a bit of light on an alternative and very different interpretation of Jesus teachings one that was widely followed in the early years of Christianity yet more closely resembles the enlightenment teachings of Zen and Buddhism The Zen-like nature
