

EVALUATE THE EFFECTIVENESS OF LEGAL AND NON LEGAL RESPONSES IN RESOLVING CONFLICT AND WORKING TOWARDS WORLD ORDER

World order is defined as the activities and relationships between the world's states and other significant non-state global actors that occur within a legal, political and economic framework, and thus implies a requisite level of international peace and stability. Non legal measures such as the media, and political negotiations, in addition to legal measures of the UN Security Council have to varying degrees been effective in working towards achieving world order.

Political negotiation is the simplest, and most frequently used non-legal measure to resolve differences between nations peacefully and diplomatically. It can be instrumental in providing a peaceful preventative resolution to threats against world order, whilst maintaining diplomacy between States.

However, political negotiations are not always effective, due to the lack of political will of parties, epitomized in the Six Party Talks between North & South Korea and the Permanent Five aimed at finding a peaceful resolution prompted by security concerns over North Korea's (DPRK) withdrawal from the Nuclear Non Proliferation Treaty in 2006. In a 2005 Joint Agreement, DPRK agreed to abandon all nuclear weapons programs, however progress towards achieving world order retrograded by the 2006 missile test.

However through China's diplomatic pressure, the nuclear crisis came to a head, as members outlined a denuclearization plan, and DPRK shut its main nuclear plant in Yongbyeon. Again, tensions heightened after the alleged sinking of the South Korean Navy Ship Cheonan and the shelling of Yeongpyeong in 2009. Nonetheless political negotiations continued resulting in a "leap day agreement", under which Pyongyang agreed to place a moratorium on its nuclear and long-range missile tests in return for 240,000 tons of food aid provided by the US to alleviate the chronic food shortages and looming humanitarian crisis, from which 1/3 of the population is suffering from according to Amnesty International. However, again, progress towards a more stable world order was jeopardized with DPRK's satellite launch, reportedly disguised as a long range missile, according to a BBC article on 13th April 2011 "North Korea rocket launch fails".

Thus the nuclear crises posed by DPRK's nuclear proliferation highlights how political negotiations are effective to the extent nation states exercise political will to respond to world order issues, and aren't always effective, demonstrated by the breakdown in Six Party Talks to address the nuclear threat posed by the hostile state.

The media plays a crucial non-legal role in the maintenance of world order. Traditional forms of media and the emergence of social media such as Facebook, Twitter, and Youtube has mainly facilitated the globalization serving as venues for the expression of dissent, dissemination of information, and collective action whilst promoting social, economic and political development.

The media can be very influential in regulating, maintaining, and preserving world order, highlighted in their paramount role in the Libyan uprising as part of the "Arab Spring". In the initial days of protests, citizens of Benghazi began collecting and documenting the brutal crackdowns and violence committed

Rethinking Theory and History in the Cold War Richard Saull, 2001 Rethinking Theory and History in the Cold War focuses on what we mean by politics and international relations and how such assumptions have come to determine our understanding of the Cold War Using an historical materialist method the author criticizes conventional conceptions of international politics that tend to focus on the agency of and relations among states and offers an alternative historical sociology of the Cold War through an analysis of the relationship between formal political authority and socio economic production Seen from this perspective the state the modern conceptions of politics can be seen as products of a capitalist modernity in which politics is based on the separation of the spheres of politics in the state and economics in civil society
