

M50 cover on an M26/65 helmet showing the peak and curtain worn folded up over the helmet crown. The mesh section could be used to attach foliage for camouflage.

designed in 1959. The first pattern M1960 cover was fastened using buttons but these were soon replaced by hook and loop fastener (Velcro) on the later production covers. The cover consisted of a broad net section that fitted over the crown of the helmet. At the front was a wide peak that could be worn down or folded back against the helmet. At the sides a fabric curtain could be worn as protection for the wearer's neck and face. This curtain could be folded up and fastened against the side of the helmet when not needed.

M1926/65; M1937/65

Although the model 1937 helmet began to replace the earlier M1921 patterns and M1926 helmets just prior to the Second World War, the earlier types remained in use for quite some time with second-line troops. The M1926 and M1937 helmets continued to be issued post-Second World War and were modernized from 1965. Externally the modified helmets were identical but they were upgraded internally. The original three-pad liner was first replaced by a multi-section liner similar to the German Second World War style. This was soon superseded by a web cradle with leather sweatband and a new webbing chinstrap with twin fastenings – fixed and break-free – as used on the German M1A1 (160). This liner was designated the M1965, while the modified helmets were known as the M1937/65 and M1926/65.

US M1 helmets, painted sky blue, were used in limited numbers by Swedish troops serving with the UN during the 1960s.

M1990

The current Swedish helmet is the Hjälm 90, a ballistic composite helmet initially produced by the British manufacturer Courtaulds Aerospace, but later made in Sweden. The helmet has the standard PASGT shape. Earlier patterns used a liner with three large padded leather supports. The leather pads were later replaced by a mesh-type cradle assembly.

The M90 helmet is provided with a modernized version of the M60 helmet cover, the four-tone camouflage Hjälmduk 90.

The Hjälmduk 90 as used with the M90 helmet. The mesh curtain is worn rolled against the shell, secured with three snap-fastened straps. Elasticized straps allow for the fitting of additional camouflage.

M1926/65 (left) and M1937/65 helmets. Externally they are identical to the M26 and M37 helmets.

War on Land Britannica Educational Publishing, 2011-11-01 Long before they took to the sea and air, warring factions engaged in land-based conflicts that involved close-range combat with rudimentary defenses and weapons. As civilizations have advanced, so too have their military strategies, tactics and weaponry. Eventually, this led to the development of sophisticated land fortifications, arms, artillery and missile systems in use today by ground troops. This insightful volume examines the evolution of warfare on land around the world, as well as the impact of new technologies on the nature of war.
