Wars That Within Rhythms Greedom:

The Musical Times & Singing-class Circular ,1919 You Can't Go to War without Song Omotayo Jolaosho,2022-07-26

You Can't Go to War without Song explores the role of public performance in political activism in contemporary South Africa. Weaving together detailed ethnographic fieldwork and an astute theoretical framework, Omotayo Jolaosho examines the cohesive power of protest songs and dances within the Anti-Privatisation Forum (APF), one of many social movements that emerged in the wake of South Africa's democratic transition after 1994. Jolaosho demonstrates the ways APF members adapted anti-apartheid songs and dance to create new expressive forms that informed and commented on their struggles for access to water, electricity, housing, education, and health facilities, the costs of which had been made prohibitive by privatization. You Can't Go to War without Song offers profiles of individual activists to amplify its central point: social movements like the APF are best understood as the coming together of individuals, and it is the songs and dances of the movement that bind these individuals together and create opportunity for community organization. Chapters on women and youth complicate such understandings of community, however, showing how activists' lives and experiences are shaped by gender and generation.

Since black music has been the primary carrier of African rhythms, both black religion and dance are dependent on black music. Spencer contends that it is from black music that black people glean what he calls rhythmic confidence, a phenomenon he describes as essentially equivalent to soul. He explains how this rhythmic confidence is sometimes casual and calm, and at other times explicit and insurgent, such as in rap music.
