Public Library, Museum and Art Gallery,1907 Islands, Identity and the Literary Imagination Elizabeth McMahon,2016-07-09 Australia is the planet s sole island continent This book argues that the uniqueness of this geography has shaped Australian history and culture including its literature Further it shows how the fluctuating definition of the island continent throws new light on the relationship between islands and continents in the mapping of modernity The book links the historical and geographical conditions of islands with their potent role in the imaginaries of European colonisation It prises apart the tangled web of geography fantasy desire and writing that has framed the Western understanding of islands both their real and material conditions and their symbolic power from antiquity into globalised modernity The book also traces how this spatial imaginary has shaped the modern man who is imagined as being the island's mirror. The interrelationship of the island fantasy, colonial expansion and the literary construction of place and history created a new man, the dislocated and alienated subject of post colonial modernity. This book looks at the contradictory images of islands from the allure of the desert island as a paradise where the world can be made anew to their roles as prisons as these ideas are made concrete at moments of British colonialism. It also considers alternatives to viewing islands as objects of possession in the archipelagic visions of island theorists and writers. It compares the European understandings of the first and last of the new worlds, the Caribbean archipelago and the Australian island continent to calibrate the different ways these disparate geographies unified and fractured the concept of the planetary globe. In particular, it examines the role of the island in this process, specifically its capacity to figure a graspable globe in the mind. The book draws on the colonial archive and ranges across Australian literature from the first novel written and published in Australia by a convict on the island of Tasmania to both the ancient dreaming and the burgeoning literature of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders in the twenty-first century. It discusses Australian literature in an international context, drawing on the long traditions of literary islands across a range of cultures. The book's approach is theoretical and engages with contemporary philosophy which uses the island and the archipelago as a key metaphor. It is also historicist and includes considerable original historical research.

The Literary World, 1897 Describing the Hand of God Robert Brennan, 2016-04-28 The question of divine agency in the world remains one important unresolved underlying obstacle in the dialogue between theology and science. Modern notions of divine agency are shown to have developed out of the interaction of three factors in early modernity. Two are well known: late medieval perfect being theology and the early modern application of the notion of the two books of God's revelation to the understanding of the natural order. It is argued the third is the early modern appropriation of the Augustinian doctrine of inspiration. This assumes the soul's existence and a particular description of divine agency in humans which became more generally applied to divine agency in nature. Whereas Newton explicitly draws the parallel between divine agency in humans and that in nature, Darwin rejects its supposed perfection and Huxley raises serious questions regarding the traditional understanding of the soul. This book offers an alternative incarnational description of divine agency, freeing consideration of divine agency from being dependent on resolving the complex issues of perfect being theology and the existence of the soul. In conversation with Barth's pneumatology, this proposal is shown to remain theologically coherent and plausible while resolving or avoiding a range of known difficulties in the science-theology dialogue.

The Cat's Pyjamas Julia Cresswell, 2007-11-01 A fascinating thematic exploration of clichés from as the actress said to the bishop to zero hour, explaining what they are and where they've come from.
