Evolution, Cognition, and Performance Bruce McConachie, 2015-12-15 Bruce McConachie explores the biocultural basis of performance from the cognitive processes that facilitate it to what keeps us engaged In Corporation Maiya J. Murphy, 2013 This dissertation asserts that physical theater reveals itself as a movement to not only generate body based aesthetic performance but also advocate an overall epistemological paradigm shift based in embodiment This project investigates Lecoq's figure of the actor creator through the lens of cognitive neuroscience cognitive linguistics and cognitive philosophy It demonstrates how cognitive neuroscience has given clear voice to embodied philosophy finally allowing body based performer training practices to be understood in their full context and range It outlines how body based performer training hijacks preexisting cognitive abilities rendering a cognitive state of theatrical creativity in which the actor creator is fully equipped to both make and inhabit theatrical creation The dissertation opens out to other body based practices including the Viewpoints of SITI Company and the work of Jerzy Grotowski to explain how this coalition of physical work has ramifications beyond practice advocating an embodied epistemology and ontology The dissertation draws out how theatre has long been intimately involved with philosophy but how this involvement has been plagued by a deep anti corporeal prejudice This prejudice despite insights from the arts social sciences and other fields has prevented an embodied philosophical approach from taking hold in western philosophy Using Thomas Kuhn's stages of scientific revolution this project traces the development of physical theatre in relation to western theatre and ultimately western epistemological history This project culminates by explaining how physical theatre practices have always sought to overthrow the linguistically based epistemological tradition and envision the conditions and qualities of a corporeal epistemology

Enacting Lecoq Maiya Murphy, 2018-12-30 This book examines the theatrical movement based pedagogy of Jacques Lecoq 1921 1999 through the lens of the cognitive scientific paradigm of enaction The conversation between these two both uncovers more of the possible cognitive processes at work in Lecoq pedagogy and proposes how Lecoq's own practical and philosophical approach could have something to offer the development of the enactive paradigm. Understanding Lecoq pedagogy through enaction can shed new light on the ways that movement key to Lecoq's own articulation of his pedagogy might cognitively constitute the development of Lecoq's ultimate creative figure the actor creator. Through an enactive lens the actor creator can be understood as not only a creative figure but also the manifestation of a fundamentally new mode of cognitive selfhood. This book engages with Lecoq pedagogy's significant practices and principles including the relationship between the instructor and student, identifications, mime, play, mask work, language improvisation and movement analysis.
