Year End Messages For Students:

Caffeine and Class Notes Jefferson Sotto Gomez, Caffeine and Class Notes Random Thoughts from a Teacher s Desk is a deeply personal and honest account of one teacher s journey through the unspoken often unseen realities of public education in the Philippines Through ten thoughtfully written chapters the author invites readers to sit beside him sometimes over a warm cup of coffee and listen to the stories struggles victories and questions that have shaped his professional life This book explores the soul of teaching not the glossy romanticized version we often hear but the version lived in classrooms where chairs wobble lesson plans are scribbled late at night and teachers carry emotional loads they rarely speak of It dives into leadership change planning professional development truth in data systemic flaws and most importantly the quiet power of integrity and unity From the loneliness of unseen labor to the bittersweet joy of shaping young lives this memoir reflects the highs and lows of being a public school teacher in a system constantly asking more but offering less With raw sincerity each chapter paints the everyday triumphs and quiet defeats of a profession that is too often underappreciated yet relentlessly hopeful This isn t just a book of stories It is a collection of reflections a mirror to those who have stood in front of blackboards sat through long meetings adjusted to changes without warning and chose to stay not because it was easy but because they still believe in the promise of education Caffeine and Class Notes is not just for teachers It s for anyone who s ever wondered what it truly means to teach not as a job but as a calling
