pertinent works of Herbert Marcuse wherein a group of hyper educated people is empowered to define what items of consumption become luxury commodities Robert Heilbroner said that although valid for their late 19th century time the Gilded Age of the 1890s the economic and sociological theories of Thorstein Veblen have limited contemporary application because the studies are specific to the societies of the U S and the city of Chicago

(Unabridged) Thorstein Veblen, 2010-11 The Theory of the Leisure Class was first published in 1899 by the Norwegian American economist and sociologist Thorstein Veblen while he was a professor at the University of Chicago The Theory of the Leisure Class is considered one of the first detailed critiques of consumerism In the book Veblen argues that economic life is driven not by notions of utility but by social vestiges from pre historic times Drawing examples from the contemporary period and anthropology he held that much of today s society is a variation on early tribal life According to Veblen beginning with primitive tribes people began to adopt a division of labor along certain lines The higher status group monopolized war and hunting while farming and cooking were considered inferior work He argued this was due to barbarism and conquest of some tribes over others Once conquerors took control they relegated the more menial and labor intensive jobs to the subjugated people while retaining the more warlike and violent work for themselves It did not matter that these menial jobs did more to support society in Veblen s view than the higher ones Even within tribes that were initially free of conquerors or violence Veblen argued that certain individuals upon watching this labor division take place in other groups began to emulate the behavior in higher status groups Veblen referred to the emerging ruling class as the leisure class He argued that while this class did perform some work and contributed to the tribe s well being it did so in only a minor peripheral and largely symbolic manner For example although hunting could provide the tribe with food it was not as productive or reliable as farming or animal domestication and compared with the latter types of work was relatively easier to perform Likewise while tribes occasionally required warriors if a conflict broke out Veblen argued that militaristic members of the leisure class retained their position and with it exemption from menial work even during the extremely long stretches of time when there was no war even though they were perfectly capable of contributing to the tribe s menial work during times of peace At the same time Veblen claimed that the leisure class managed to retain its position through both direct and indirect coercion For example the leisure class reserved for itself the honor of warfare and often prevented members of the lower classes from owning weapons or learning how to fight At the same time it made the rest of the tribe feel dependent on the leisure class s continued existence due to the fear of hostilities from other tribes or as religions began to form the hostility of imagined deities Veblen argued that the first priests and religious leaders were members of the leisure class To Veblen society never grew out of this stage it simply evolved different forms and expressions For example he noted that during the Middle Ages only the nobility was allowed to hunt and fight wars Likewise in modern times he noted that manual laborers usually make less money than white collar workers caused a select few to become ultra wealthy while millions of commoners struggled in abject poverty It was against this backdrop that Veblen an economist and sociologist at the University of Chicago wrote The Theory of the Leisure Class a book that brought the phrase conspicuous consumption into the modern vocabulary Veblen s thesis centers on the definition of what he calls the leisure class the upper social class consisting of wealthy individuals who are socially exempt from productive work Their work instead becomes what he calls conspicuous consumption spending their wealth in increasingly ostentatious ways in order to preserve their class status Meanwhile the lower and middle classes are the ones actually engaged in work that is productive to society manufacturing and industry with the goal of eventually being able to emulate the social status afforded by the conspicuous consumption of their leisure class masters Along the way Veblen links these behaviors with social strictures left over from feudal society arguing that contemporary human society has not evolved far beyond our medieval peasant and lord forefathers In those ancient societies productive labor came to be viewed as disreputable and dirty thus status is won not by accumulating wealth but by displaying the evidence of wealth He argues that many of what some would consider society s ills are linked to this fundamental concept for example the mistreatment of women forcing them into constricting clothing preventing them from participating in independent economic life is a way for their husbands to show off their unemployed status as a kind of conspicuous leisure or society s obsession with sports celebrity and organized religion all forms of conspicuous leisure that bring no productive benefit to society and on the contrary waste time and resources but whose practitioners superstars and clergy maintain a high social status Though it was written over a hundred years ago when industrial society was just getting its footing Veblen s thesis predicts much of the social stratification we recognize today Practical labor continues to be viewed as basically demeaning while people struggle in vain to chase a glimmer of the vast wealth that celebrities investors bankers hedge fund managers and C suite dwellers the conspicuously consuming leisure class of today openly flaunt As such The Theory of the Leisure Class might be one of the most prescient and influential books of economic and social science of the 20th century This book is part of the Standard Ebooks project which produces free public domain ebooks

The institution of a leisure class is found in its best development at the higher stages of the barbarian culture as for instance in feudal Europe or feudal Japan In such communities the distinction between classes is very rigorously observed and the feature of most striking economic significance in these class differences is the distinction maintained between the employments proper to the several classes The upper classes are by custom exempt or excluded from industrial occupations and are reserved for certain employments to which a degree of honour attaches Chief among the honourable employments in any feudal community is warfare and priestly service is commonly second to warfare If the barbarian community is not notably warlike the priestly office may take the precedence with that of the warrior second But the rule holds with but slight exceptions that whether warriors or priests the upper classes are exempt from industrial employments and this exemption is the economic expression of their superior rank Brahmin India affords a fair illustration of the industrial exemption of both these classes In the communities belonging to the higher barbarian culture there is a considerable differentiation of sub classes within what may be comprehensively called the leisure class and there is a corresponding differentiation of employments between these sub classes The leisure class as a whole comprises the noble and the priestly classes together with much of their retinue The occupations of the class are correspondingly diversified but they have the common economic characteristic of being non industrial These non industrial upper class occupations may be roughly comprised under government warfare religious observances and sports At an earlier but not the earliest stage of barbarism the leisure class is found in a less differentiated form Neither the class distinctions nor the distinctions between leisure class occupations are so minute and intricate The Polynesian islanders generally show this stage of the development in good form with the exception that owing to the absence of large game hunting does not hold the usual place of honour in their scheme of life The Icelandic community in the time of the Sagas also affords a fair instance In such a community there is a rigorous distinction between classes and between the occupations peculiar to each class Manual labour industry whatever has to do directly with the everyday work of getting a livelihood is the exclusive occupation of the inferior class This inferior class includes slaves and other dependents and ordinarily also all the women If there are several grades of aristocracy the women of high rank are commonly exempt from industrial employment or at least from the more vulgar kinds of manual labour The men of the upper classes are not only exempt but by prescriptive custom they are debarred from all industrial occupations The range of employments open to them is rigidly defined As on the higher plane already spoken of these employments are government warfare religious observances and sports These four lines of activity govern the scheme of life of the upper classes and for the highest rank the kings or chieftains these are the only kinds of activity that custom or the common sense of the community will allow. Indeed where the scheme is well developed even sports are accounted doubtfully legitimate for the members of the highest rank. To the lower grades of the leisure class certain other employments are open but they are employments that are subsidiary to one or another of these typical leisure class occupations. Such are for instance

The Theory of the Leisure Class Thorstein Veblen, 2020-02-24

The Theory of the Leisure Class: An Economic Study of Institutions 1899 by Thorstein Veblen is a treatise on economics and a detailed social critique of conspicuous consumption as a function of social class and of consumerism derived from the social stratification of people and the division of labour which are social institutions of the feudal period 9th-15th c that have continued to the modern era. Veblen asserts that the contemporary lords of the manor, the businessmen who own the means of production, have employed themselves in the economically unproductive practices of conspicuous consumption and conspicuous leisure which are useless activities that contribute neither to the economy nor to the material production of the useful goods and services required for the functioning of society, while it is the middle class and the working class who are usefully employed in the industrialised productive occupations that support the whole of society.

Conducted in the late 19th century, Veblen's socio-economic analyses of the business cycles and the consequent price politics of the U.S. economy and of the emergent division of labour by technocratic speciality—scientist, engineer, technologist, etc.—proved to be accurate sociological predictions of the economic structure of an industrial society.

The Theory of the Leisure Class: An Economic Study of Institutions 1899 presents the evolutionary development of human institutions, social and economic, that shape society, such as how the citizens earn their livelihoods, wherein technology and the industrial arts are the creative forces of economic production. That such production of goods and services was not merely the means of meeting the material needs of society but of earning profits for the owners of the means of production. That the industrial production system required the workers, men and women, to be diligent, efficient, and co-operative whilst the owners, businessmen, and businesswomen concerned themselves with making money and with the public display of their accumulated wealth, and that such behaviours, conspicuous consumption and conspicuous leisure, survived from the predatory barbarian past of the tribal stage of modern society.

Originally published as The Theory of the Leisure Class: An Economic Study in the Evolution of Institutions 1899, the book arose from three articles that Veblen published in the American Journal of Sociology: i) The Beginning of Ownership; ii) The Barbarian Status of Women; and iii) The Instinct of Workmanship and the Irrationality of Labor 1898-99, which presented the major themes of economics and sociology that he later developed in works such as The Theory of Business Enterprise 1904 about how incompatible are the pursuit of profit and the making of useful goods, and The Instinct of Workmanship and the State of the Industrial Arts 1914 about the fundamental conflict between the human predisposition to useful production and the societal institutions that waste the useful products of human effort.
