Configurable Software Performance Completions through Higher-Order Model Transformations Happe, Lucia, 2014-11-26
Chillies is a novel approach for variable model transformations closing the gap between abstract architecture models used for performance prediction and required low level details. We enable variability of transformations using chain of generators based on the Higher Order Transformation HOT. HOTs target different goals such as template instantiation or transformation composition. In addition we discuss state dependent behavior in prediction models and quality of model transformations. This text then presents applications of these models to some helicopter flight problems. This book also explains the four requirements in programming a computer based model of the sensory performance of a pilot as 1 prediction capability 2 measurement capability 3 provision of compatible computer algorithms and 4 image driven. This collection also describes cognitive structures aspects of the human information processing system. This text then discusses resource management and time sharing issues that is related to competition of scarce resources which can be predictive of the quality of information processing. This book also describes other modeling scenarios such as those predicting human errors decision making and shape modeling. This text can prove valuable for computer programmers engineers physicists and research scientists dealing with psychophysics. Attention and Performance VI Stanislav Dornič, 2022-08-19
