Yeast Stress Responses Stefan Hohmann, Willem H. Mager, 1997-01-01 Every cell has developed mechanisms to respond to changes in its environment and to adapt its growth and metabolism to unfavorable conditions The unicellular eukaryote yeast has long proven as a particularly useful model system for the analysis of cellular stress responses and the completion of the yeast genome sequence has only added to its power This volume comprehensively reviews both the basic features of the yeast general stress response and the specific adaptations to different stress types nutrient depletion osmotic and heat shock as well as salt and oxidative stress It includes the latest findings in the field and discusses the implications for the analysis of stress response mechanisms in higher eukaryotes as well

Stress Biology of Yeasts and Fungi Hiroshi Takagi, Hiroshi Kitagaki, 2015-03-19 This book describes cutting edge science and technology of the characterization breeding and development of yeasts and fungi used worldwide in fermentation industries such as alcohol beverage brewing bread making and bioethanol production The book also covers numerous topics and important areas the previous literature has missed ranging widely from molecular mechanisms to biotechnological applications related to stress response tolerance of yeasts and fungi During fermentation processes cells of yeast and fungus mostly Saccharomyces and Aspergillus oryzae spp respectively are exposed to a variety of fermentation stresses Such stresses lead to growth inhibition or cell death Under severe stress conditions their fermentation ability and enzyme productivity are rather limited Therefore in terms of industrial application stress tolerance is the key characteristic for yeast and fungal cells The first part of this book provides stress response tolerance mechanisms of yeast used for the production of sake beer wine bread and bioethanol The second part covers stress response tolerance mechanisms of fungi during environmental changes and biological processes of industrial fermentation Readers benefit nicely from the novel understandings and methodologies of these industrial microbes The book is suitable for both academic scientists and graduate level students specialized in applied microbiology and biochemistry and biotechnology and for industrial researchers and engineers who are involved in fermentation based technologies The fundamental studies described in this book can be applied to the breeding of useful microbes yeasts fungi

Regulating Growth Versus Stress Defense in the Yeast Environmental Stress Response Rachel Ann Kocik, 2025 All cells must be able to respond to stressful conditions including drugs environmental shifts mutation and disease Activation of a stress response typically requires redirection of cellular resources from growth promoting processes toward stress defense however how cells reallocate resources and which cellular objectives dictate these changes is poorly understood Budding yeast Saccharomyces cerevisiae is an excellent model to study how cells respond to stress since many aspects of stress biology are conserved in other organisms Upon an acute stress yeast activate a common transcriptomic response known as the environmental stress response ESR The ESR includes induced iESR genes involved in defense regulated by transcription factors TFs Msn2 and Msn4 and repressed rESR genes involved in growth regulated in part by TF repressors Dot6 and Tod6 Here we investigate the interplay between Msn2 Msn4 and Dot6 Tod6 to understand resource allocation in yeast We utilized live cell microscopy imaging to measure activation dynamics of Msn2 and Dot6 along with other single cell phenotypes such as growth rate cell size and cell cycle phase before and after salt stress We found that Msn2 and Dot6 displayed unexpected discordance in their behavior and that grouping cells based on TF behavior revealed subpopulations of cells with distinct post stress growth properties Unexpectedly increased activation of the Dot6 repressor which represses growth promoting genes in the rESR led to faster post stress growth rate Further investigation revealed that loss of Dot6 Tod6 led to slower post stress growth and a delay in acquiring subsequent stress resistance while a loss of Msn2 4 led to faster post stress growth but loss of acquired stress resistance We propose that rESR repression helps to redirect transcriptional and translational resources to iESR induction Remarkably we found that Msn2 4 regulate the abundance and activation of Dot6 and help represses rESR genes Together this supports a model in which acute stress activates Msn2 4 to induce stress defense genes and aid in repressing rESR genes that are repressed to reallocate resources toward iESR genes accelerating the acquisition of stress tolerance and enabling cells to respond dynamically to stress

AMP Deaminase Reaction as a Control System of Glycolysis in Yeast Masataka Yoshino, Keiko Murakami, 1985 A Study of Yeast Stress Responses and Conserved Eukaryotic Homeostatic Mechanisms Daniel Waller, 2011

The Molecular Basis of the Ethanol-stress Response in the Yeast Saccharomyces Cerevisiae Dianne Emslie, 2002 Coordination and Integration of Signaling and Resources Allocation in the Yeast Stress Response, 2015 Proper stress responses are pivotal for cells to survive and adapt to new environments Stressed cells coordinate a multi faceted response spanning many levels of physiology involving growth and cell cycle arrest metabolites changes translation arrest and a large fraction of transcriptomic change which includes the common environmental stress response ESR Yet knowledge of the complete stress activated regulatory network principles for signal integration as well as the rationale of ESR activation upon stress remains elusive To decipher complicated signaling networks

we developed an experimental and computational approach to integrate available protein interaction data with gene fitness contributions mutant transcriptome profiles and phospho proteome changes in cells responding to salt stress to infer the salt responsive signaling network in yeast The inferred subnetwork presented many novel predictions by implicating new regulators uncovering unrecognized crosstalk between known pathways and pointing to previously unknown hubs of signal integration We exploited these predictions to show that Cdc14 phosphatase is a central hub in the network and that modification of RNA polymerase II coordinates ESR activation induction of stress defense genes with reduction of growth related transcripts Additionally we show that the yeast ESR cannot be simply explained as a byproduct of altered cell cycle distribution or arrested growth upon stress given that arrest of growth and cell cycle progression did not trigger strong ESR activation Furthermore ESR transcripts did not fluctuate with cell cycle phase in dividing cells and did not respond to arrest points as proposed previously We also show that activation of the ESR is an active response to stress as arrested cells show robust dose dependent ESR activation in response to stress We propose that ESR activation helps reallocate transcription and translation capacity to stress defense genes upon stresses
