Women, Culture, and Community : Religion and Reform in Galveston, 1880-1920 Elizabeth Hayes Turner Associate Professor of History University of Houston, 1997-11-17 In this work Elizabeth Turner addresses a central question in post Reconstruction social history why did middle class women expand their activities from the private to the public sphere and begin in the years just before World War I an unprecedented activism Using Galveston as a case study Turner examines how a generally conservative traditional environment could produce important women s organizations for Progressive reform She concludes that the women of Galveston though slow to respond to national movements were stirred to action on behalf of their local community Local organizations particularly Episcopal and Presbyterian churches and traditional everyday social activities provided a nurturing environment for budding reformers and a foundation for activist organizations and programs such as poor relief and progressive reform Ultimately women became politicized even as they continued their roles as guardians of traditional domestic values Women Culture and Community will appeal to scholars and students of the post Reconstruction South women s history activist history and religious history White Creole Culture, Politics and Identity During the Age of Abolition David Lambert, 2005-07-21 This book explores the articulation of white creole identity in Barbados during the age of abolitionism Seeing Nature Through Gender Virginia Scharff, 2003 Environmental history has traditionally told the story of Man and Nature Scholars have too frequently overlooked the ways in which their predominantly male subjects have themselves been shaped by gender Seeing Nature through Gender here reintroduces gender as a meaningful category of analysis for environmental history showing how women s actions desires and choices have shaped the world and seeing men as gendered actors as well In thirteen essays that show how gendered ideas have shaped the ways in which people have represented experienced and consumed their world Virginia Scharff and her coauthors explore interactions between gender and environment in history Ranging from colonial borderlands to transnational boundaries from mountaintop to marketplace they focus on historical representations of humans and nature on questions about consumption on environmental politics and on the complex reciprocal relations among human bodies and changing landscapes They also challenge the ecofeminist position by challenging the notion that men and women are essentially different creatures with biologically different destinies Each article shows how a person or group of people in history have understood nature in gendered terms and acted accordingly often with dire consequences for other people and organisms Here are considerations of the ways we study sexuality among birds of William Byrd s masking sexual encounters in his account of an eighteenth century expedition of how the ecology of fire in a changing built environment has reshaped firefighters own gendered identities Some are playful as in a piece on the evolution of snow bunnies to shred betties Others are dead serious as in a chilling portrait of how endocrine disrupters are reinventing humans animals and water systems from the cellular level out Aiding and adding significantly to the enterprise of environmental history Seeing Nature through Gender bridges gender history and environmental history in unexpected ways to show us how the natural world can remake the gendered patterns we ve engraved on ourselves and on the planet
