Baring-Gould, 2020-09-28 In the middle of last century there lived in Wakefield a certain Peter Priestly who for many years was sexton of the parish church of All Saints The then vicar was Michael Bacon D D a tall portly man of a commanding presence who wore a large bushy wig as was the wont of many old divines of that date He was a man of rather a warm temperament and was apt at times when matters did not flow quite according to his will to grow a little irritable and whilst in that condition his habit was frequently to thrust his right hand in a testy impetuous way under his wig This habit destroyed the symmetry of that capital ornament and made it protrude considerably on the right side and this protrusion grew greater the longer the wig was worn The vicar s wigs were inherited and worn by the sexton whose venerable and awe inspiring appearance was much enhanced thereby Mrs Priestly in vain endeavoured to reduce the protuberance of hair on the right side so as not to betray the origin of the wig The horse hair resumed its elasticity in spite of her efforts and the congregation in the parish church were amused to see the stately Doctor in his reading desk with a deformed wig and below him the scarcely less stately clerk in a wig the counterpart of that of the Doctor But what amused the wags not a little was to observe the fact that when the Doctor s wig was perfectly symmetrical instantly the sexton s assumed the most exaggerated inequality in the sides The secret of course was that the Doctor had donned a new wig and had given his old one to the clerk But after a while the irascible vicar had succeeded in brushing out the tufts of his false head of hair on the right and simultaneously the continued efforts of Mrs Priestly had reduced the right hand protuberance in the wig of her husband Consequently as one bush grew the other shrank into itself But there were points like the equinoxes when both wigs were alike Now it fell out that Doctor Bacon had determined to present himself with a new wig one Easter and he had accordingly given Peter Priestly his old wig which had arrived at its maximum of extension on the right hand side Peter had heard it said that on S Mark s Eve the spirits of all those who are to die during the year may be seen in the church Half believing this popular superstition and half in doubt about the truth of it and thinking moreover that if it might be so he should like to know whether trade would be brisk for him during the rest of the year he decided that anyhow he would go to the church and see what would happen and not wishing to spend his time idly he determined to occupy himself with lettering some grave stones which he had not completed The place in which he carried on this work was the base of the church tower which was shut off from the nave by a large boarded partition against which stood the west gallery of the church The opening from the tower into the nave consisted of large folding doors Yorkshire Oddities, Incidents, and Strange Events Sabine

Baring-Gould,2019-09-16 Yorkshire Oddities, Incidents, and Strange Events S. Baring-Gould,2019-11-21 In Yorkshire Oddities Incidents and Strange Events S Baring Gould masterfully compiles a series of captivating tales that delve into the peculiarities and supernatural occurrences rooted in Yorkshire's rich tapestry of folklore. With a keen eye for detail and a narrative style that blends meticulous research with vivid storytelling, Baring Gould immerses the reader in the historical and cultural backdrop of 19th century England. This collection not only entertains but also serves as an invaluable resource for those interested in the region's myths and the human experiences that give rise to them, reflecting on themes of superstition, local color, and the interplay between the ordinary and the extraordinary. S Baring Gould, an accomplished author and folklorist, was deeply influenced by his extensive experiences in rural England, particularly Yorkshire. His background as a clergyman and a scholar of both history and literature informed his understanding of the stories and legends that permeate the local landscape and vernacular. Baring Gould's passion for collecting tales, combined with his love for Yorkshire, led him to document these unique occurrences that might otherwise fade into obscurity, preserving them for future generations.
