

PREVENT MASS VIOLENCE

Active shooters do not snap - they consider, plan, and prepare for their attacks. Because of this, many active shooters display concerning behaviors prior to their attacks that others may be able to observe and identify in that person's life.

No single behavior means a person is on a path to committing targeted violence, but multiple concerning behaviors may indicate cause for concern. Common concerning behaviors are:

Significantly reduced ability to cope with stress or setbacks

Expressions of hopelessness, helplessness

Persistent fantasies about violence

Lack of non-violent options for solving problems
