✓ Exclusively available on IvyPanda

Introduction

Is there such a thing as “feminine discourse”? Is there a discernable difference between the writing of male and female authors? People discussing this subject are trying to find out. There is a discussion about this subject even in different languages as if writing is not dependent upon language. If these intellectuals find a “feminine writing”, is this good or bad? Would “feminine writing” be based upon biology or culture? These are just a few questions about this topic.

While I would, personally, not argue that there is or is not a “feminine voice”, I would be put to task to define the difference. I know that I, as a reader, am one of the minorities who hear a voice while reading. This makes my reading slower, but my retention is also higher. I also notice that I do not remember being wrong about the gender of the writer, even when I read the text of a type where I do not immediately note the author, especially in academic writing. I often do not pay a lot of attention to the author before reading non-fiction, but when I find out the author’s name I can normally extrapolate the gender from it. While collaborative writing may be problematic, I do not remember ever noting that I had heard the wrong voice. It would be very interesting to find out why. Perhaps, in passing, I saw the author’s name and yet did not notice it consciously, but my mind matched it anyway. Perhaps, there is a difference between male and female writing.

Susan Sellers

I found Susan Sellers to be a little difficult to pin down. She quotes Cixous, and she attaches texts, but I just cannot make the connection between them. For example, in the introduction Sellers writes: “Cixous suggests that feminine writing is potentially the province of both sexes, she believes women are currently closer to a feminine economy than men. As a result, she sees in women’s writing the potential to circumvent and reformulate existing structures through the inclusion of other experiences.....Cixous
