Water Trading and Global Water Scarcity Josefina Maestu, 2013 Water scarcity is an increasing problem in many parts of the world yet conventional supply side economics and management are insufficient to deal with it In this book the role of water trading as an instrument of integrated water resources management is explored in depth It is also shown to be an instrument for conflict resolution where it may be necessary to reallocate water in the context of increasing scarcity Recent experiences of implementation in different river basins have shown their potential as instruments for improving allocation These experiences however also show that there are implementation challenges and some limitations to trading that need to be considered This book explores the various types of water trading formulas through the experience of using them in different parts of the world The final result is varied because in most cases trading is conditioned by the legal and institutional framework in which the transactions are carried out The role of government and the definition of water rights and licenses are critical for the success of water trading The book studies the institutional framework and how transactions have been undertaken drawing some lessons on how trading can improve It also analyses whether trading has really been a positive instrument to manage scarcity and improve water ecosystems and pollution emission problems in those parts of the world which are most affected The book concludes by making policy proposals to improve the implementation of water trading

Water Communication Analysis of Strategies and Campaigns from the Water Sector Editor Celine Herve Bazin Celsa Sorbonne University Paris France Legal Geographies of Water Cristy Clark, 2025-06-30 This book deepens our understanding of humanity's diverse relationships with water and the law providing a critical assessment of this relationship and charting the course towards a more sustainable and just water future By using legal geography this book pays particular attention to the place based inter relationships between water people and law both formal and informal and to the ways that law both constitutes and is constituted by the relationship between people and place Starting in the 1980s Chapter 2 investigates the early commodification of water through the liberalisation of rural water markets in Chile and the urban water supply and sanitation systems of England and Wales Chapter 3 then examines the global expansion of neoliberal water governance in the 1990s starting with donor driven reforms in the global south and particularly Manila in the Philippines Chapters 4 and 5 document both the grassroots response to these neoliberal water reforms and the inherent tensions in the attempts of the early 2000s to reconcile the recognition of a human right to water with the ongoing rollout of market mechanisms both in the domestic context of South Africa and within the United Nations human rights system Moving forward again Chapter 6 examines the recent intensification of neoliberal water governance through financialisation and considers its specific impacts in Detroit and Flint Michigan Chapter 7 then considers the renewed global emphasis on living waters and Indigenous ontologies of water by examining the new legislative arrangements for the Whanganui River in Aotearoa New Zealand The book concludes in Chapter 8 by highlighting the stories of hope that can be found in many of the case studies explored in the book and in emerging examples from around the world This book is essential reading for students and scholars interested in water law security and justice from across a wide range of disciplines including environmental studies law geography human rights and political ecology

The Human Right to Water Nandita Singh, 2016-10-06 The discourse on the human right to water presents deliberations on the concept content and rationale for the right with little attention to the practical question of translating the right into reality This book aims to fill this void by focusing on realization of the right by its holders examining how effective the mechanisms are for implementing the right in enabling its universal realization In a quest to answer this question the book draws a conceptual differentiation between implementation and realization of the right arguing that unlike implementation which is an objective process of creation and implementation of measures such as legal frameworks institutional structures or policy and action guidelines realization of the right is a subjective process that extends much beyond It takes shape within specific contextual settings which may include varied situations yet remains neglected in the related academic and action forums This book attempts to address this void by discussing some of the most significant contexts and the underlying problems and concerns that strongly influence realization of the human right to water It contends that if the right is to be truly realized these different contexts which can be further classified as objective and subjective must be understood analysed and appropriately addressed before framing and implementing relevant action The book further situates the human right to water discourse in a broader interdisciplinary perspective expanding its scope beyond the narrower legal dimensions linking it to the wider field of water resources management governance Through the novel ideas it proposes the book makes an innovative and unique contribution in the field of human right to water which is of great scientific value The No-nonsense Guide to Water Maggie Black,2004 Water sustains life without it humans cannot survive for more than a few days And yet this precious fluid is becoming increasingly politicized as the debates about control and ownership of water itself and of the many organizations which govern its use gain force Maggie Black explores the many roles water plays in human life and as the defense of water rights looks set to become an explosive issue provides a clear overview on the vital issues of distribution technology irrigation land use and commodification Water Julian Caldecott,2008-09-04 All known forms of life depend on water Covering 71 per cent of the Earth's surface water seems to be plentiful But there are 1.2 billion people who currently live without a safe water supply the amount of available drinking water is shrinking and the need for it is increasing relentlessly While some regions are receiving too much rain others are receiving too little We are approaching a global water emergency Julian Caldecott examines the vital role this fascinating substance plays on our planet and explores the historical scientific political and economic reasons behind the looming water crisis He reveals where the water we use comes from and at what social and environmental cost This is an intriguing and sometimes unsettling portrait of the future of water in our changing world and what we can all do to make a difference What Water Is Worth: Overlooked Non-Economic Value in Water Resources K. Russo,Z. Smith,2013-10-22 What Water is Worth addresses both conventional and non conventional values of water discussing the value of water as it relates to conventional microeconomics water's true utility and government regulation and new and current practices in water management Water on Tap Bronwen Morgan,2011-04-21 In the 1990s and mid 2000s turbulent political and social protests surrounded the issue of private sector involvement in providing urban water services in both the developed and developing world Water on Tap explores examples of such conflicts in six national settings France Bolivia Chile Argentina South Africa and New Zealand focusing on a central question how were rights and regulation mobilized to address the demands of redistribution and recognition Two modes of governance emerged managed liberalization and participatory democracy often in hybrid forms that complicated simple oppositions between public and private commodity and human right The case studies examine the effects of transnational and domestic regulatory frameworks shaping the provision of urban water services bilateral investment treaties and the contributions of non state actors such as transnational corporations civil society organisations and social movement activists The conceptual framework developed can be applied to a wide range of transnational governance contexts A Journey in the Future of Water Terje Tvedt,2013-10-25 Nourished by fears of global warming and climate change water has become an issue of international concern In Journey in the Future of Water leading water expert Terje Tvedt travels to 25 countries and all continents to find

Privatizing Water Karen Bakker,2013-02-15 Water supply privatization was emblematic of the neoliberal turn in development policy in the 1990s Proponents argued that the private sector could provide better services at lower costs than governments opponents questioned the risks involved in delegating control over a life sustaining resource to for profit companies Private sector activity was most concentrated and contested in large cities in developing countries where the widespread lack of access to networked water supplies was characterized as a global crisis In Privatizing Water Karen Bakker focuses on three questions Why did privatization emerge as a preferred alternative for managing urban water supply Can privatization fulfill its proponents expectations particularly with respect to water supply to the urban poor And given the apparent shortcomings of both privatization and conventional approaches to government provision what are the alternatives In answering these questions Bakker engages with broader debates over the role of the private sector in development the role of urban communities in the provision of public services and the governance of public goods She introduces the concept of governance failure as a means of exploring the limitations facing both private companies and governments Critically examining a range of issues including the transnational struggle over the human right to water the commons as a water supply management strategy and the environmental dimensions of water privatization Privatizing Water is a balanced exploration of a critical issue that affects billions of people around the world

The Right to Water Farhana Sultana, Alex Loftus, 2013-10-18 The right to clean water has been adopted by the United Nations as a basic human right Yet how such universal calls for a right to water are understood negotiated experienced and struggled over remain key challenges The Right to Water elucidates how universal calls for rights articulate with local historical geographical contexts governance politics and social struggles thereby highlighting the challenges and the possibilities that exist Bringing together a unique range of academics policy makers and activists the book analyzes how struggles for the right to water have attempted to translate moral arguments over access to safe water into workable claims This book is an intervention at a crucial moment into the shape and future direction of struggles for the right to water in a range of political geographic and socio economics contexts seeking to be pro active in defining what this struggle could mean and how it might be taken forward in a far broader transformative politics The Right to Water engages with a range of approaches that focus on philosophical legal and governance perspectives before seeking to apply these more abstract arguments to an array of concrete struggles and case studies In so doing the book builds on empirical examples from Africa Asia Oceania Latin America the Middle East North America and the European Union
