This book is a study of digital workers across diverse contexts in China and Europe giving valuable insight into their origins, abilities and working conditions. As the growth of digital work changes the nature of work and employment and the consequences of this for individual workers, this book considers the shift of much economic activity to online activity, examines increasing economic globalization that involves a new global division of labour with novel forms of global capitalism and emphasises the fact that increasingly work for many people is now digital work. It highlights the consequences of this shift which include the casualisation of work, new subaltern labor and the precarity of employment contracts, whether as self-employment or digital wage and the relations between digital work, globalization and emotional capitalism. It discusses how new forms of labour exploitation and how individual and collective mobilizations are emerging, how specific groups such as migrants are especially vulnerable and how these new forms of capitalism and of working are leading to a rearrangement of the geographical structure of the world economy with notable consequences for Asia and other non-Western regions. Broadening the global understanding of the evolving nature of work in the digital age, this book will be of interest to students and scholars of the sociology of work and economic sociology as well as digital sociology.
