

The background of the cover is a vibrant, stylized illustration of a town. In the foreground, there are several houses with different colored roofs and walls, including a prominent blue house with multiple windows. Behind it, there are more houses, some with red roofs and others with green walls. The town is surrounded by lush green trees and bushes. A large, white, cloud-like shape is positioned in the upper center, containing the title and author's name. The overall style is whimsical and colorful.

The Trotters Of Tweeville Zavis Damavis:

The Trotters of Tweeville Shirin Zarqa-Lederman, 2014-09-09 Zavis DaMavis is a happy young boy and a proud resident of a whimsical town called Tweeville. He goes off to school one morning when his mom, a very wise woman, gives him an important reminder. But what does it mean to treat others the way you'd like to be treated? While Zavis ponders his mother's advice as he walks to school, he is distracted by an elderly man who needs a hand getting across the street. When he's done helping, he finds that he's forgotten what she said. Zavis must remember his mother's words if he's ever going to understand what they mean. But how can he think when he's so busy being kind to his friends? Teaching our children the golden rule is one of the most important and effective ways to empower kids to make kind, helpful decisions. In the spirit of Dr. Seuss, author-certified counselor Shirin Zarqa-Lederman uses brightly colored images and simple, silly prose to challenge young readers while engaging them on the topic of morality. Inspire your children to treat others as they'd like to be treated with this fun, easy-to-read installment of The Trotters of Tweeville.

The Trotters of Tweeville Shirin Zarqa-Lederman, 2015-09-24 JouJou McVue has anointed herself as princess of the kind village known as Tweeville at least for today. She is a mindful princess who knows the value of stopping to smell the roses and that being hasty means wasting opportunities to experience the world around her. Her father, however, is always in a race against time. Today JouJou and her father have one hour to ride around the lake in her neighborhood. As they begin, her father speeds ahead while she stops to compliment her neighbor Mr. Fred on his ripe red tomatoes. Will her dad slow down to play in a pile of leaves? Will he stop to welcome a new friend like JouJou does? Can he slow down to catch a lost puppy? In the third book of the Trotters of Tweeville series, a little girl demonstrates the value of being mindful by reminding her father the opportunities that he wastes in his haste.
