McCall, 2018-05-30 This book argues that classical natural law jurisprudence provides a superior answer to the questions What is law and How should law be made rather than those provided by legal positivism and new natural law theories What is law How should law be made Using St Thomas Aquinas's analogy of God as an architect Brian McCall argues that classical natural law jurisprudence provides an answer to these questions far superior to those provided by legal positivism or the new natural law theories The Architecture of Law explores the metaphor of law as an architectural building project with eternal law as the foundation natural law as the frame divine law as the guidance provided by the architect and human law as the provider of the defining details and ornamentation Classical jurisprudence is presented as a synthesis of the work of the greatest minds of antiquity and the medieval period including Cicero Aristotle Gratian Augustine and Aquinas the significant texts of each receive detailed exposition in these pages Along with McCall's development of the architectural image he raises a question that becomes a running theme throughout the book To what extent does one need to know God to accept and understand natural law jurisprudence given its foundational premise that all authority comes from God The separation of the study of law from knowledge of theology and morality McCall argues only results in the impoverishment of our understanding of law He concludes that they must be reunited in order for jurisprudence to flourish This book will appeal to academics students in law philosophy and theology and to all those interested in legal or political philosophy New Scholasticism Meets Analytic Philosophy Rafael Hüntelmann, Johannes Hattler, 2021-08-31 Recent decades have seen a

Hegel's Apotheosis of Logic Stephen Theron, 2017-01-06 This book presents what Hegel calls the vital spirit of the actual world the truth namely of logic's form and content as one concrete whole Axiomatic here is that thinking is necessarily free and unbounded if we could escape a performative contradiction in evaluating it Thinking is absolute what Hegel calls spirit or mind Geist He identifies three forms of absolute spirit namely art religion and philosophy where each form is absorbed into the next one philosophy subsumes religion and religion subsumes art in a process seeking and achieving the absolute Philosophy therefore is ultimately theology as fulfilling the latter in mind's constitutive self transcendence towards the absolute idea itself the absolute Hegel asserts This is absolute idealism where the Idea is true being and finite things are transitory notions This book aims to clarify such conceptions whereby theological transcendent grace is natural or all in all faith is absolute knowledge in germ things are the opposite of what they immediately seem while achieved self consciousness is the ruin of the individual abstractly parted from its objects Thus external nature is internal the whole in or one with the part necessity absolute freedom these being stages of Logic Hegel needs a second related trio to the above three forms This is logic nature and mind likewise in ceaseless process a returning upon self Thus art's foundational quality mirrors that of the logical art The individual art object art as striving for absolute perfection founds spirit's trajectory Hence consciousness first appears individual only as set towards universal self consciousness in absolute knowing
