The Transnational Capitalist Class:

The Transnational Capitalist Class Leslie Sklair, 2001 While most of the popular and academic debates explore ideas of globalization The Transnational Capitalist Class goes one step further and provides theoretically informed empirical research to explain and deconstruct the process of globalization as seen by the corporations themselves Using personal interviews with executives and managers from over eighty Fortune Global 500 corporations as well as already published sources Sklair demonstrates how globalization works from the perspective of those who control and oppose the major globalizing corporations and their allies in government and the media The book explores two major crises of globalization class polarization and ecological sustainability and shows how the transnational capitalist class attempts to resolve these crises and evaluates its own success and failure Sklair's unique approach brings a fresh perspective to what has become a key debate of our time

The Transnational Capitalist Class Leslie Sklair, 2001 Globalizing the Caribbean Jeb Sprague, 2020-08-17 The beautiful Caribbean basin is fertile ground for a study of capitalism past and present Transnational corporations move money and labor around the region as national regulations are reworked to promote conditions benefiting private capital Globalizing the Caribbean offers a probing account of the region's experience of economic globalization while considering gendered and racialized social relations and the frequent exploitation of workers Jeb Sprague focuses on the social and material nature of this new era in the history of world capitalism He combines an historical overview of capitalism in the region with theoretical analysis backed by case studies Sprague elaborates upon the role of class formation and the restructuring of local states He considers both U.S. hegemony and how various upsurges from below and crises occur He examines the globalization of the cruise ship and mining businesses looks at the growth of migrant labor and reverse flow of remittances and describes the evolving role of export processing and supranational associations In doing so Sprague shows how transnationally oriented elites have come to rule the Caribbean and how capitalist globalization in the region occurs alongside shifting political institutional and organizational dynamics

The Making of a Transnational Capitalist Class William K. Carroll, 2013-04-04 Throughout the world there has been a growing wave of interest in global corporate power and the rise of a transnational capitalist class triggered by economic and political transformations that have blurred national borders and disembedded corporate business from national domiciles Using social network analysis William Carroll maps the changing field of power generated by elite relations among the world's largest corporations and related political organizations Carroll provides an in depth analysis that spans the three decades of the late 20th and early 21st century when capitalist globalization attained unprecedented momentum propelled both by the transnationalization of accumulation and by the political paradigm of transnational neoliberalism This has been an era in which national governments have deregulated capital international institutions such as the World Trade Organization and the World Economic Forum have gained prominence and production and finance have become more fully transnational increasing the structural power of capital over communities and workers Within this context of transformation the book charts the making of a transnational capitalist class reaching beyond national forms of capitalist class organization into a global field but facing spirited opposition from below in an ongoing struggle that is also a struggle over alternative global futures

Global Capitalism and Transnational Class Formation Jason Struna, 2016-03-17 The global capitalism perspective is a unique research program focused on understanding relatively recent developments in worldwide social economic and political practices related to globalization At its core it seeks to contextualize the rearticulation of nation states and broad geographic regions into highly interdependent networks of production and distribution and in so doing explain consequent changes in social relations within and between countries in the contemporary era The present volume contributes to this effort by focusing on social class formation across borders via the processes and actors that make globalized capitalism possible The essays presented here offer a wide range of emphases in terms of the particular lenses and evidence they use They cover such topics as the emergence of a transnational capitalist class based fascist regime responding to the structural crises of global capitalism as well as the links between global class formation and the US racial project as it relates to electoral politics and demographic changes in the US South This book was published as a special issue of Globalizations

Globalization and Transnational Capitalism in Asia and Oceania Jeb Sprague, 2015-12-15 News headlines warn of rivalries and competing nations across Asia and the Pacific even as powerful new cross border relations form as never before This book looks behind the Asia Pacific curtain at the new forms of social economic and political integration taking place through a global capitalism that is rife with contradictions inequality and crisis We are moved beyond traditional conceptualizations of the inter state system with its nation state competition as the core organizing principle of world capitalism and the principal institutional framework that shapes the makeup of global social forces These important studies examine and debate over how there is a growing transnationality of material economic relations in the global era as well as an emerging transnationality of many social and class relations How does transnational capitalist class fractions new middle strata and labor undergird globalization in Asia and Oceania How have states and institutions become entwined with such processes This book provides insight into a field of dynamic change

Rethinking Globalization and the Transnational Capitalist Class David Chen, 2020 The arrest of Meng Wanzhou and the Huawei prosecution have revealed a mounting battle for high tech supremacy between the United States and China The ongoing technology war and the trade war are merely one dimension of a far reaching and accelerating imperialist rivalry The changing reality on the world stage has urged a reconsideration of the thesis of transnational capitalist class TCC and theory of globalization in general By reviewing the historical debate between the globalist and critical realist schools I argue that William Carroll s theoretical frame of global capitalism grounded in corporate network research through emphasizing a dialectical process of the making of the TCC is better equipped to explain the unfolding Sino U S conflict Following Carroll s multilayered approach to corporate network research I conduct a corporate network analysis to examine the directorate interlocks of 40 Chinese transnational corporations TNCs selected from the Fortune Global 500 list My study has found that the transnational networks of Chinese TNCs have remained considerably sparse contained within condensed national networks The globalization of Chinese TNCs and Chinese corporate elite has been modest and has not undermined or replaced the national base This is due to two crucial reasons the statist character of Chinese capitalist class and the regionalized development of global capitalism and class formation In concordance with Carroll s network research of Western companies my study of corporate China reaffirms the fragility of the TCC its internal friction and potential decomposition It also provides a material ground for analyzing the Sino U S inter imperialist rivalry as a structural development out of global capitalism and its class relations My thesis study therefore offers the first attempt to draw a direct linkage between corporate network formation and geopolitical conflict
