

ACHIEVEMENT GOAL THEORY

Achievment Goal Theory is a theory that argues a person's degree of motivation to achieve a goal is influenced by their goal orientation The four goal orientations are listed below.

MASTERY- APPROACH

Wanting to complete a task for the purpose of self-improvement and learning as much as possible.

MASTERY- AVOIDANCE

Wanting to avoid a task because they feel they won't learn as much as they need to in order to complete the task.

PERFORMANCE- APPROACH

The desire to complete a task in order to outperform a peer group, achieve the appearance of superiority, and receive an extrinsic reward.

PERFORMANCE- AVOIDANCE

The desire to avoid the task to evade embarrassment, shame, self-doubt, or public failure.

Social Goals in the Classroom Martin H. Jones, 2019-09-18 Social Goals in the Classroom is the first volume to comprehensively examine the variety of students non academic goals and motivations within the classroom Each expertly written chapter defines and investigates a particular aspect of students social objectives before addressing related findings on academic performance interpersonal outcomes and directions for future research Presented in three succinct and comprehensive parts this book reviews expands upon and theoretically synthesizes current research on the many different social goals to offer readers a thorough understanding of non academic desires and their consequences on learners educational experiences Situated in evidence based theory as well as real world contexts such as ethnicity sexual orientation and social media this insightful collection ideal for graduate students teachers and researchers explores how students social motives influence their academic performance and peer relationships

Noncognitive psychological processes and academic achievement Jihyun Lee, Lazar Stankov, 2017-10-02 It is becoming increasingly clear that non cognitive psychological processes are important for students school achievement even to the point where their influence may be stronger than that exerted by the parents teachers or the school atmosphere itself Non cognitive psychological variables refer to varieties of self beliefs and goal orientations such as anxiety confidence self efficacy and self concept which are often seen as dispositional and motivational in nature It is particularly important to highlight the role that confidence and self efficacy play in school achievement as these two self beliefs are related to metacognitive processing the awareness of what you know and what you do not know Self concept meanwhile tends to exert its influence on an individual s choice of tertiary level courses This book suggests that by focusing on students self beliefs the education system may be in a position to improve cognitive performance since individual students self beliefs may be more malleable than the cognitive processes involved in acquiring academic knowledge Focusing on these non cognitive psychological processes is also likely to be more effective in improving performance than system wide interventions involving changes in policy for both public and private sector educators This book will be useful to educational researchers school leaders administrators counsellors and teachers in guiding students attitudes towards learning and school performance It will also provide students in psychology and education with broad and nuanced insights into the drivers of school achievement This book was originally published as a special issue of Educational Psychology
