Experiences of Counselling in Action Dave Mearns, Windy Dryden, 1989-12-06 How hard it is to find a book to recommend to trainees which will give them an insight into what counselling and psychotherapy too for that matter is really like This book does exactly that This is a book which would be equally useful to the humanistic practitioner and the more orthodox one The breadth of sympathy is admirable in dealing with what is common to all orientations This is one of those rare books which does justice both to the human experiences involved in counselling and psychotherapy and to the theory which might explain those experiences Changes What is the experience of counselling from the perspectives of both client and counsellor What can be learned for the practice of counselling from an understanding of how it feels to be a client or a counsellor Addressing these questions central to this book are the personal accounts of individual clients and counsellors who each relate their own very different experiences of counselling They explore such issues as identity expectations trust power and boundaries in the client counsellor relationship And each examines the intense personal meanings of success or failure in the client or counsellor role An analysis of the implications for the counselling relationship concludes the volume

Personal Construct Counselling in Action Fay Fransella, Peggy Dalton, 2000-03-27 Praise for the First Edition In Britain few people can have contributed more to the development of a personal construct approach than Fay Fransella and Peggy Dalton Their book is primarily written for those who may wish to incorporate Kelly's ideas into their existing counselling framework This is an informative book which is concise well written and with no shortage of clinical examples relevant to all who are interested in counselling and psychotherapy British Journal of Psychology The revised and updated edition of this practical accessible book gives a clear introduction to personal construct counselling for counselling trainees and practitioners alike Outlining the key principles of the personal construct approach to counselling and relating them to practice the book carefully explores ways in which counsellors through credulous listening to everything the client says and does not say can build the client's awareness of the manner in which he or she construes problems The range of methods that can be used to help the counsellor and client learn more about inherent contradictions and their implications are described and illustrated The book goes on to show how the counsellor and client in partnership can then devise experiments for change through which the client can try out new and more rewarding ways of constructing and acting A number of approaches to facilitating change are discussed and exemplified
