Iron Age Echoes David R. Fontijn, Quentin Bourgeois, Arjen Louwen, 2011 Groups of burial mounds may be among the most tangible and visible remains of Europe's prehistoric past Yet not much is known on how barrow landscapes came into being This book deals with that topic by presenting the results of archaeological research carried out on a group of just two barrows that crown a small hilltop near the Echoput echo well in Apeldoorn the Netherlands In 2007 archaeologists of the Ancestral Mounds project of Leiden University carried out an excavation of parts of these mounds and their immediate environment They discovered that these mounds are rare examples of monumental barrows from the later part of the Iron Age They were probably built at the same time and their similarities are so conspicuous that one might speak of twin barrows The research team was able to reconstruct the long term history of this hilltop We can follow how the hilltop that is now deep in the forests of the natural reserve of the Kroondomein Het Loo once was an open place in the landscape With pragmatism not unlike our own we see how our prehistoric predecessors carefully managed and maintained the open area for a long time before it was transformed into a funerary site The excavation yielded many details on how people built the barrows by cutting and arranging heather sods and how the mounds were used for burial rituals in the Iron Age

Bruc ealles well Marc Lodewijckx, 2004 The essays in this book are about the peoples of North West Europe in the first millennium AD They were written by archaeologists from various countries who either reveal the results of their archaeological fieldwork or place the knowledge they have of their particular region in a wider supraregional context It is commonly known that archaeologists prefer to devote their time to fieldwork Considering the limited number of archaeologists and the multitude of opportunities for fieldwork this preference is quite understandable if not even obvious In addition to this essay writing is a cumbersome and exhausting activity The warm and enthusiastic response to our request for contributions made it possible to compose an interesting volume We hope that this publication may encourage many others to remain active in the field of archaeology and that the cooperation among colleagues stimulated by this project may be continued in the future
