Tussen Academie En Industrie Casimirs Visie Op Wetenschap En Researchmanagement:

Tussen academie en industrie, 1984 Applied Evaluative Informetrics Henk F. Moed, 2017-09-08 This book presents an introduction to the field of applied evaluative informetrics dealing with the use of bibliometric or informetric indicators in research assessment. It sketches the field's history, recent achievements, and its potential and limits. The book dedicates special attention to the application context of quantitative research assessment. It describes research assessment as an evaluation science and distinguishes various assessment models in which the domain of informetrics and the policy sphere are disentangled analytically. It illustrates how external non-informetric factors influence indicator development and how the policy context impacts the setup of an assessment process. It also clarifies common misunderstandings in the interpretation of some often used statistics. Addressing the way forward, the book expresses the author's critical views on a series of fundamental problems in the current use of research performance indicators in research assessment. Highlighting the potential of informetric techniques, a series of new features is proposed that could be implemented in future assessment processes. It sketches a perspective on altmetrics and proposes new lines in longer term strategic indicator research. It is written for interested scholars from all domains of science and scholarship and especially for all those subjected to research assessment: research students at advanced master and PhD level, research managers, funders, and science policy officials and to practitioners and students in the field.

Models of Scientific Development and the Case of Nuclear Magnetic Resonance Henk Zandvoort, 2012-12-06 From the nineteen sixties onwards a branch of philosophy of science has come to development called history oriented philosophy of science. This development constitutes a reaction on the then prevailing logical empiricist conception of scientific knowledge. The latter was increasingly seen as suffering from insurmountable internal problems like e.g. the problems with the particular observational theoretical distinction on which it drew. In addition, the logical empiricists' general approach was increasingly criticized for two external shortcomings. Firstly, the examples of scientific knowledge that the logical empiricists were focusing on were considered as too simplistic to be informative on the nature of real life science. Secondly, it was felt that the attention of these philosophers of science was restricted to the static aspects of scientific knowledge while neglecting its developmental aspects. History oriented philosophy of science has taken up the challenge implicit in the latter two criticisms: i.e. to develop accounts of science that would be more adequate for understanding the development of real life science. One of the more successful products of this branch of philosophy of science is Lakatos's theory of scientific development, sometimes called the methodology of scientific research programmes. This theory conceives science as consisting of so called research programmes developing in time and competing with each other over the issue which one generates the best explanations of the phenomena that they address.

Inventing Structures for Industrial Research Kees Boersma, 2002 The early history of the Philips National Laboratory began in the winter of 1913 when Gerard Philips and his brother Anton founded a research organization as a separate part of their company in Eindhoven. The Philips brothers hired Gilles Holst and others to carry out scientific experiments in order to improve existing light bulb technology and later to create new products such as x ray tubes and radio sets Holst became the leader and organizer of the research laboratory Scientists who worked under him proved the business value of industrial research for the Philips company The National Laboratory story indicates that it was not enough for Philips to simply have a tradition of innovation the company also needed to create a culture and structure that permitted the coordination between people and resources that was necessary for developing innovations in an industrial context These innovations spawned such diverse topics as irradiation of plants with artificial light and creating an agricultural research network of particular interest is comparisons drawn between Philips and General Electric Kees Boersma shows that the National Laboratory history in the first decades of the twentieth century can be seen as part of a broader development internationally During the function of the industrial research laboratory became institutionalized The institutionalization process of industrial research involved an intentional structuring of the research organization in the company in which various persons worked together in specific business contexts At a local level Philips people headed by Holst reinvented the research function It is exactly this process that is central this book This will be a welcome addition to the literature on business history informed as it is by a sense of social theory and social organizations Kees Boersma is a historian who works as a researcher in the group of Culture Organization and Management of the Faculty of Social Studies at the Free University of Amsterdam His research expertise is grounded in the areas of science technology culture and organization studies Technology and Engineering Michel Lette, Michel Oris, 2000
