

FCU – The patient is asked to flex their wrist against resistance; the tension in the tendon of FCU can be seen and palpated.

FDP (little finger) – Stabilise the patient's little finger PIPJ in extension and feel for active flexion of the DIPJ against resistance.

ADM – Ask the patient to hold their hands with palms facing their face and spread open their fingers. Push the little finger towards the ring finger. Weakness results in the inability of the little finger to maintain its position.

First dorsal interosseous – Hold the patient's hand with the index finger uppermost. Ask them to lift the finger (abduct), then resist your pressure as you span the finger with your other hand as you palpate the muscle belly.

Froment's test – The patient is asked to grasp a piece of paper in the first web space, between their extended thumb and extended fingers. Normally, the first dorsal interosseous and adductor pollicis would be able to resist the examiner pulling the paper out and the thumb would remain extended. However, if the ulna nerve is deficient, the patient will recruit the AIN innervated FPL to grasp the paper and the thumb IP joint will flex.

The Musician's Survival Manual Richard N. Norris, 1993 We who play instruments know that there are few experiences in life that can be as fulfilling as making music When giving to an audience we are able to have positive influence not only on others but also ourselves When there is a synthesis of physical action emotion technique and thought music making can reach incredible heights But often our goals are thwarted by physical limitations and pain For decades musicians have recognized the many factors some unpleasant that are essential to mastering an instrument diligent practice organization discipline travel to good schools purchase of fine equipment overcoming technical obstacles isolation and or loneliness performance anxiety etc We seem to be able to deal with these But it is only very recently that we are beginning to acknowledge another essential component treating our bodies as part of our instruments with the goal of preventing physical injury Thanks to doctors like Richard Norris who are working in the new field of performing arts medicine we can now improve our physical approaches to our instruments with knowledge of how our bodies do the demanding tasks we ask of them For many of us a dream has come true Musicians both performers and educators can now become more knowledgeable through conferences publications seminars and book such as Dr Norris s guide We can now work towards prevention rather than correction You will find as I have that this down to earth survival manual is an invaluable resource and took in our striving and yearning for freedom to play Janet Horvath Director Playing less Hurt Conference Series Associate Principal Cellist Minnesota Orchestra Back cover
