Cultural Dissemination and Translational Communities Katja Krebs, 2014-06-03. The early twentieth century is widely regarded as a crucial period in British theatre history; it witnessed radical reform and change with regard to textual, conceptual, and institutional practices and functions. Theatre practitioners and cultural innovators such as translators Harley Granville Barker, William Archer, and Jacob Thomas Grein, amongst others, laid the foundations during this period for what is now regarded to be modern British theatre. In this groundbreaking work, Katja Krebs offers one of the first extended attempts to integrate translation history with theatre history by analyzing the relationship between translational practice and the development of domestic dramatic tradition. She examines the relationship between the multiple roles inhabited by these cultural and theatrical reformers: directors, playwrights, critics, actors, and translators, and their positioning in a wider social and cultural context. Here she takes into consideration the translators as members of an artistic network or community the ideological and personal factors underlying translational choices the contemporaneous evaluative framework within which this translational activity for the stage occurred as well as the imprints of social and cultural traces within specific translated texts Krebs employs the examples from this period in order to raise a series of wider issues on translating dramatic texts which are important to a variety of periods and cultures Cultural Dissemination and Translational Communities demonstrates that an analysis of stage translational practices allows for an understanding of theatre history that avoids being narrowly national and instead embraces an appreciation of cultural hybridity The importance of translational activity in the construction of a domestic dramatic tradition is demonstrated within a framework of interdisciplinarity that enhances our understanding of theatrical translational as well as cultural and social systems at the international level

Theorizing Adaptation Kamilla Elliott, 2020 From film and television theory to intertextuality poststructuralism to queer theory postcolonialism to meme theory a host of contemporary theories in the humanities have engaged with adaptation studies Yet theorizing adaptation has been deemed problematic in the humanities theoretical and disciplinary wars have been charged with political incorrectness by both conservative and radical scholars and declared outdated and painfully behind the times compared to other disciplines And even separate from these problems of theorization is adaptation s subject matter with many film adaptations of literature widely and simply declared bad In this thorough and groundbreaking study author Kamilla Elliott works to detail and redress the problem of theorizing adaptation She offers the first cross disciplinary history of theorizing adaptation in the humanities extending back in time to the sixteenth century revealing that before the late eighteenth century adaptation was valued and even celebrated for its contributions to cultural progress before its eventual and ongoing marginalization Elliott also presents a discussion of humanities theorization as a process arguing the need to rethink how theorization functions within humanities disciplines and configure a new relationship between theorization and adaptation and then examines how rhetoric may work to repair this difficult relationship Ultimately Theorizing Adaptation seeks to find shared ground upon which adaptation scholars can dialogue and debate productively across disciplinary cultural and theoretical borders without requiring theoretical assent or uniformity
