Psychological Abuse Lauren Kozlowski, The devastation of a controlling relationship has to be endured to be believed From the constant fear of upsetting your spouse the walking on eggshells in case you ve done or said something wrong or the relentless feeling of anxiety a controlling partner will beat you down until you no longer recognize yourself Coercive control will see an abuser dominate their victim s life from the food they eat the people they see the places they can go and the things they can say A controlling partner through fear and intimidation will seek to ensure their victim is subdued to the point of accepting any and all abuse that s fired their way By manipulation gaslighting lies and hurtful insults the abuser will make their victim a willing puppet on a string ready to be utilized how the controlling spouse sees fit Coercive control is seldom talked about in comparison to other forms of abuse yet it s so commonplace in relationships Plenty of victims of this type of behavior may not even be aware that s it s full blown abuse Many more see controlling behavior as their partner s way of showing they care In order to shed light on this topic and reach out to those who need help in understanding and

Still Walking on Egg Shells Christine M. Leischner,1997 Woman abuse is a serious problem in our society and our ready acceptance of men s treatment groups as a solution to woman abuse maybe short sighted Outcome investigations of abusive men s treatment groups have failed to include women s experience as a measure of treatment success and often disparity exists on whether success has been achieved Many studies examine only physical abuse and fail to acknowledge the role of psychological abuse in relationships The goal of this study was to listen to the voices of those women who have stayed with their partners after the men have completed group treatment and to understand their day to day experience of living with the treated man This feminist oriented descriptive phenomenological study investigates five women using face to face interview techniques Descriptive information was generated from audio taped interviews A metaphor emerged as the core phenomenon which participants described as still walking on eggshells This described the experience of living with their partners post group and defined the essential element of the post group experience Within this core phenomenon five themes were identified safety women s work of staying in the relationship partner s use of power and control concern for children and the role of the system These descriptions of the essence of the post group relationship allow us to hear from the women who experience the daily reality of still walking on egg shells a perspective often unheard and therefore unacknowledged These perspectives indicate a need to review our current treatment options for abusive men as a means of providing greater safety to women
