

Avoid skin contact with oil. Long-term or repeated skin contact with oil can make your skin dry out. The consequence is irritation, dry skin, eczema and other skin disorders.

Used oil is more hazardous to health than new oil. Use protective gloves and avoid oil-soaked clothes and rags. Wash regularly, especially before meals. Use special skin cream to avoid drying and facilitate skin cleaning.

Most chemicals intended for the product (e.g. engine and transmission oils, glycol, petrol (gasoline) and diesel oil) or chemicals for workshop use (e.g. degreasers, paints and solvents) are hazardous. Read the instruction on the package carefully! Always observe the safety advice (e.g. use of breathing protection, goggles, gloves etc.). Make sure that other personnel are not inadvertently exposed to hazardous substances, such as via the air they breathe. Ensure good ventilation. Handle used and surplus chemicals in the prescribed manner.

Be very careful when searching for leaks in the fuel system and testing fuel injectors. Use goggles. The jet which comes from a fuel injector has very high pressure and considerable penetration ability. Fuel can force its way deep into body tissue and cause severe injury. Risk of blood poisoning (septicemia).

All fuels, and many chemicals, are flammable. Make sure that open flames or sparks can not set them alight. Petrol (gasoline), some thinners and hydrogen gas from batteries are extremely flammable and explosive when mixed with air in the correct ratio. Do not smoke! Provide good ventilation and take the necessary precautions before you start welding or grinding work in the vicinity. Always have a fire extinguisher easily available near the workplace.

Make sure that oil and fuel-soaked rags, and used fuel and oil filters are stored in a safe place. Oil soaked rags can self-ignite in certain circumstances. Used fuel and oil filters are polluting waste and must be handed to an approved waste management facility for destruction, together with used lubrication oil, contaminated fuel, paint residue, solvents, degreasers and wash residue.

Batteries must never be exposed to open flames or electric sparks. Do not smoke close to the batteries. The batteries generate hydrogen gas when charged, which forms an explosive gas when mixed with air. This gas is very flammable and highly explosive. A spark, which can be formed if the batteries are wrongly connected, is enough to make a battery explode and cause damage. Do not move the connections when you attempt to start the engine (risk of arcing), and do not stand and lean over one of the batteries.

Never mix up the battery positive and negative poles when the batteries are installed. If the batteries are wrongly connected, this can cause severe damage to the electrical equipment. Please check the wiring diagram!

Always use goggles when charging and handling batteries. Battery electrolyte contains highly corrosive sulfuric acid. If this comes into contact with your skin, wash at once with soap and a lot of water. If you get battery acid in your eyes, flush at once with a generous amount of water, and get medical assistance at once.

Stop the engine and cut the system current with the main switch(es) before doing any work on the electrical system.

The clutch must be adjusted with the engine shut off.

The existing lugs on the engine/reverse gear should be used for lifting. Always check that the lifting devices are in good condition and that they have the correct capacity for the lift (the weight of the engine plus the reverse gear and extra equipment if installed). The engine should be lifted with a customized or adjustable lifting boom for safe handling and to avoid damaging components on top of the engine. All chains or cables should be parallel to each other and should be as square as possible to the top of the engine. If other equipment connected to the engine has altered its centre of gravity, special lifting devices may be needed to obtain the correct balance and safe handling. Never do any work on an engine which just hangs from a lifting device.
