Rethinking Migration Bridget Anderson, 2025-02-17 Available open access digitally under CC BY NC ND licence Humans have always moved but across the world migration has become a major policy political and media concern How can we understand human movement without positioning the migrant as a problem This interdisciplinary collection rethinks migration and movement It explores mobility beyond the human and across time from the movement of soil in the Middle Ages to contemporary cow passports It also examines the histories of international borders and how they are intertwined with the politics of race and nation The book illustrates that conceptually based critical and creative thinking is as important for practice as it is for theory and can help us understand and respond to migration as a force that connects rather than divides

Penman,2007 Typical accounts of Anglo Scottish relations during the 14th century tends to present a sustained period of bitter enmity However this book shows that the situation was far more complex Drawing together new perspectives from leading researchers the essays investigate the great complexity of the Anglo Scottish tensions Land Law and People in Medieval Scotland Neville Cynthia J. Neville,2012-10-16 This ambitious book newly available in paperback examines the encounter between Gaels and Europeans in Scotland in the central Middle Ages offering new insights into an important period in the formation of the Scots national identity It is based on a close reading of the texts of several thousand charters indentures briefs and other written sources that record the business conducted in royal and baronial courts across the length and breadth of the medieval kingdom between 1150 and 1400 Under the broad themes of land law and people this book explores how the customs laws and traditions of the native inhabitants and those of incoming settlers interacted and influenced each other Drawing on a range of theoretical and methodological approaches the author places her subject matter firmly within the recent historiography of the British Isles and demonstrates how the experience of Scotland was both similar to and a distinct manifestation of a wider process of Europeanisation Alexander III, 1249-1286 Norman H. Reid, 2019-05-23 Winner of the Saltire Society Scottish History Book of the Year Presiding over an age of relative peace and prosperity Alexander III represented the zenith of Scottish medieval kingship The events which followed his early and unexpected death plunged Scotland into turmoil and into a period of warfare and internal decline which almost brought about the demise of the Scottish state This study fills a serious gap in the historiography of medieval Scotland For many decades even centuries Scotland's medieval kingship has been regarded as a close likeness of the English monarchy having been modernised in that image by the twelfth and thirteenth century kings who had close relationships with their southern counterparts Recent research has cast doubt on that view and this examination of Alexander III's reign is based on a view of Scottish kingship which depends on much firmer continuity with its earlier Celtic past It challenges accepted truth revealing that the nature of state and government and the relationships between ruler and subject were quite different from the previous received view On the cusp of a dynastic catastrophe which led to economic and political disaster Alexander III's reign captures a snapshot of Scotland at the end of a period of sustained peace and development a view of the medieval state as it really was Empires and Bureaucracy in World History Peter Crooks, Timothy H. Parsons, 2016-08-11 A comparative study of the power and limits of bureaucracy in historical empires from ancient Rome to the twentieth century England and Scotland at War, C.1296-c.1513 Andy King, David Simpkin, 2012-06-22 In England and Scotland at War c 1296 c 1513 Andy King and David Simpkin bring together new perspectives on the Anglo Scottish conflict from Dunbar to Flodden The essays focus on the military history of the wars from both sides of the border Robert Bruce and the Community of the Realm of Scotland G W S Barrow, 2013-10-31 An Edinburgh Classic edition to commemorate the 700th anniversary of the Battle of Bannockburn in 1314 The Letters of Edward I Kathleen B. Neal, 2021 Detailed examination of the letters of Edward I reveals them to be powerful and sophisticated political tools Highly commended for the Royal Studies Journal Book Prize 2022 As formulaic in appearance as they are abundant in the archives it is easy to underestimate the power of the letters generated by medieval governments but these acts of communication were more than mere containers of information Operating at the intersection of the spoken and the written the performed and the observed they produced a discourse that maximized royal authority and promoted solidarity between sender and recipient This book situates letters within medieval theories of composition and habits of reception to argue that even mundane letters of governance were rhetorical texts It focuses on the example of Edward I of England whose rhetorical prowess was noted often critically by contemporaries It shows how the king's correspondence varied in tone vocabulary and structure across his reign and between recipients revealing an unexpected dynamism of political discourse Moving between historical context and close readings of individual letters this volume identifies letter writing as an art through which the king and his government attempted to negotiate and mould relationships with political communities and diplomatic interlocutors alike

The Chronicle of Geoffrey Le Baker of Swinbrook Geoffrey Baker, 2012 Geoffrey le Baker's chronicle covers the reigns of Edward II and Edward III up to the English victory at Poitiers David Preest's new translation includes extensive notes and an introduction by Richard Barber Geoffrey le Baker's chronicle covers the reigns of Edward II and Edward III up to the English victory at Poitiers It starts in a low key copying an earlier chronicle but by the end of Edward II's reign he offers a much more vivid account His description of Edward II's last days is partly based on the eyewitness account of his patron Sir Thomas de la More who was present at one critical interview Baker's story of Edward's death like many other details from his chronicle was picked up by Tudor historians particularly by Holinshed who was the source for Shakespeare's history plays. The reign of Edward III is dominated not by Edward III himself but by his real hero Edward prince of Wales. His bravery aged 16 at Crècy is presented as a prelude to his victory at Poitiers a battle which Baker is able to describe in great detail apparently from what he was told by the prince's commanders. It is a rarity among medieval battles because in sharp contrast to the total anarchy at Crècy the prince and his staff were able to see the enemy's manoeuvres. Throughout the chronicle there are sharply defined vignettes which stay in the mind: the killing of the Scottish champion on Halidon Hill; the drowning of Sir Edward Bohun; the earls of Salisbury and Suffolk as prisoners carried in a cart; the death of Sir Walter Selby and his two sons; the bravery of Sir Thomas Dagworth against a cobbler's son; the duel between Otho and the duke of Lancaster; John Dancaster and the lewd washerwoman. Baker writes in a complex Latin which even scholars find problematic and David Preest's new translation will be widely welcomed by anyone interested in the fourteenth century. There are extensive notes and an introduction by Richard Barber.

A Medieval Life Graham Fairclough, 2025-04-17. Offers a biographical and archaeological exploration of William de Felton, builder of Edlingham Castle. A Medieval Life: William de Felton and Edlingham Castle 1260-1327 is a biography of a little known man living in late thirteenth and early fourteenth century Britain. William's precise birth and death dates are unrecorded; his place of origin has for a long time been unclear and his parentage is still uncertain. Although somewhat wealthy and privileged, William does not represent either the high aristocracy or the great and the good of his time, and a central theme of this book is how to write a biography of someone relatively anonymous in the Middle Ages. There are plenty of books about kings, queens and battles; this book offers a different perspective. Its origin lies in archaeological excavations between 1978 and 1982 at Edlingham, Northumberland. The first house here which grew to be called a castle was built in the years around 1300. It was abandoned before the 1660s after less than four centuries of habitation and nearly three centuries before it was uncovered by excavation. This book is not an excavation report, however, nor an architectural survey, but an attempt to excavate the buried and concealed life of the castle's founder and to understand the unusual building he created. It is a biographical approach to history framed by archaeological and landscape perspectives: the biography of one man which illuminates the lives of those around him and serves as a biography of a place and landscape. William de Felton's story can be told because he was unexpectedly well documented. His career as a middle-ranking servant in the royal households of Edward I and Edward II combined with the bureaucratic habits of the king's clerks has bequeathed to historians two hundred documents that mention him. These documents are often individually banal but taken together and with other documentary evidence for William's family, neighbours, friends and colleagues, they enable a reconstruction of his life. They show us William as husband and father, as a landowner and as a traveller moving with the king's armies and household from his native Shropshire widely around England into Wales, France, Flanders and Scotland, perhaps slightly contrary to the idea that medieval people travelled little. William began his career as an usher in the king's bedchamber and for many years was a soldier during Edward I's foreign wars the early attempt to create by force a single nation on the British islands He was an administrator or governor of occupied territories in Wales and Scotland and later a local official in his adopted Northumberland He was also a builder notably for the king in Gascony and other places but also in his own right at Edlingham Castle the centre piece of this book now an English Heritage public property
