It is impossible in a short review to do justice to the quality and variety of all these perspectives. Universities are undergoing a series of profound changes. One of the more pronounced of these involves the partnerships that are now being formed between business enterprises and higher education. The emergence of these partnerships has much to do with the changing economy which is increasingly based around knowledge and information, the traditional stock in trade of the university. Knowledge capitalism has given a renewed impetus to higher education. One expression of this is work based learning which challenges the scope and site of the university curriculum. This book analyses this development from a number of perspectives: critical, historical, philosophical, sociological and pedagogical. Its various contributors argue that work based approaches contain much that is challenging to the university and also much that could help to create new frameworks of learning and new roles for academics. Working Knowledge offers a comprehensive examination of the new vocationalism in higher education. Teaching English Language Learners in Career and Technical Education Programs Victor M. Hernández-Gantes, William Blank, 2008-10-09 Exploring the unique challenges of vocational education, this book provides simple and straightforward advice on how to teach English Language Learners in today's Career and Technical Education programs. The authors' teaching framework and case studies draw from common settings in which career and technical educators find themselves working with ELLs in the classroom, in the laboratory or workshop, and in work based learning settings. By integrating CTE and academic instruction and embedding career development activities across the curriculum, readers will gain a better understanding of the challenges of teaching occupationally oriented content to a diverse group of learners in multiple settings. Reshaping the American Workforce in a Changing Economy Harry J. Describes labour market developments during the period 1960-2004. Building America's Skilled Technical Workforce National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, National Academy of Engineering, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Policy and Global Affairs, Board on Science Education, Board on Higher Education and Workforce, Board on Science, Technology, and Economic Policy, Committee on the

In response to globalization and advances in science and technology, American firms are demanding workers with greater proficiency in literacy and numeracy as well as strong interpersonal, technical, and problem-solving skills. However, employer surveys and industry and government reports have raised concerns that the nation may not have an adequate supply of skilled technical workers to achieve its competitiveness and economic growth objectives. In response to the broader need for policy information and advice, Building America's Skilled Technical Workforce examines the coverage, effectiveness, flexibility, and coordination of the policies and various programs that prepare Americans for skilled technical jobs. This report provides action-oriented recommendations for improving the American system of technical education, training, and certification.
