

UNFOLDING Reasoning Case Study:

Postpartum Hemorrhage (PPH)

History of Present Problem:

Brenda Jackson is a 22-year-old African American, G-1, now T-1 P-0 A-0 L-1 who is Group B strep positive and was treated with four doses of penicillin G. She had a vaginal delivery over an intact perineum after 19 hours of labor at 39 weeks gestation. She has been clinically stable and is about to be transferred to the postpartum unit after a two-hour recovery period. Oxytocin 20 units in 1000 mL of Lactated Ringer's is infusing at a fixed rate of 125 mL/hr in a 20 g peripheral IV in her left hand. Type and screen done on admission, Hgb 12.6/Hct 38.

Her last set of vital signs were:

- T: 99.4 F/37.4 C
- P: 95
- R: 18
- BP: 110/67.

She has gotten up to void once and had 50 mL of blood-tinged urine. Her fundus is firm at the umbilicus, and has a small amount of dark red lochia. She is physically exhausted and has been anxious since delivery because her labor and delivery were harder than she ever expected.

Personal/Social History:

Brenda is an advanced nursing student in her final year. She is single and remains in a relationship with her boyfriend, who is also the father of her baby. She lives at home with her parents, who are supportive.

Evaluating the Use of a Postpartum Hemorrhage Simulation as a Teaching Strategy in an Undergraduate Nursing Program Pat DiGiacomo, 2017 A recurring theme in the literature is that simulation is a positive teaching strategy when compared to other methods of instruction and produces positive student outcomes Jefferies 2016 Simulation provides educators a way to reproduce a clinical teaching experience in a safe supportive learning environment The purpose of this quantitative research study was to determine whether an obstetrical simulation educational experience is an effective strategy for educating undergraduate nursing students in the management of a postpartum hemorrhage A quasi experimental study using a pre test and post test design was employed in a Women s Health Course and Pediatrics course over one semester A single convenience sample N 81 of junior baccalaureate nursing students was used for this study There were 41 students in the control group and 40 in the experimental group Both the control and experimental groups received the traditional didactic session case study skills lab instruction and clinical In addition the experimental group received the postpartum simulation This simulation study tested the differences in knowledge satisfaction and confidence level between junior nursing students who did and did not participate in the simulation There were three instruments used during this study a pre test post test for knowledge acquisition the National League for Nursing NLN 2005 student satisfaction and confidence level survey and the Creighton Competency Evaluation Instrument C CEI Todd Manz Hawkins Parsons it is important that faculty prepare nursing graduates to provide safe care Even though there were limitations to this study a convenience sample at one public university the findings are informative and have implications for future teaching and learning strategies The results of this study add to the body of knowledge that supports the use of simulation as a teaching strategy in undergraduate nursing education

Postpartum Hemorrhage Incidence and Blood Loss Amounts After Implementation of Preventive Measures at a Midwestern Metropolitan Hospital Shawn Renee Meyer, 2014 The purpose of this retrospective descriptive and correlational study was to examine the incidence of postpartum hemorrhage PPH diagnosis and blood loss within the first 24 hours of birth The study compared cases pre and post implementation of new hemorrhage preventative measures at a metropolitan Minnesota maternity care center Neuman s Systems Model was used as a theoretical framework for this study to understand PPH and nursing implications Pre and post implementation groups were significantly different in race and delivery type No statistically significant differences were found between the groups in incidence and total blood loss amounts

Management of Postpartum Hemorrhage Frances E. Likis, 2015

OBJECTIVES To systematically review evidence addressing the management of postpartum hemorrhage PPH including evidence for the benefits and harms of nonsurgical and surgical treatments interventions for anemia after PPH is resolved and effects of systems level interventions

DATA SOURCES We searched the MEDLINE r Embase and Cumulative Index to Nursing and Allied Health Literature CINAHL r databases for articles published in English since 1990

REVIEW METHODS We included comparative studies of nonsurgical and surgical interventions to manage PPH published in English from 1990 to November 2014 and conducted in high resource countries We also included case series addressing harms of interventions and benefits and harms of procedures and surgeries for PPH as these interventions are unlikely to be addressed in randomized studies Two investigators independently screened studies against predetermined inclusion criteria including study design country of conduct and outcomes addressed and independently rated the quality of included studies We extracted data into evidence and summary tables and summarized them qualitatively

RESULTS We identified a total of 68 unique studies Sixty one studies addressed effectiveness outcomes none of good quality 23 fair and 38 poor Fifty studies reported harms of interventions for PPH management 11 good quality and 39 poor Few studies addressed pharmacologic or medical management including transfusion for supportive management of ongoing PPH and evidence is insufficient to comment on effects of such interventions The success of uterine sparing techniques such as uterine balloon tamponade embolization uterine compression sutures and uterine and other pelvic artery ligation in controlling bleeding without the need for additional procedures or surgeries ranged from 36 to 98 percent However these data come from a limited number of studies with a small number of participants Harms of interventions were diverse and not well understood Studies suggested an association between recombinant activated factor VIIa and thromboembolic events but sample sizes were small Some studies with longer term followup reported adverse effects on future fertility and menstrual changes in women undergoing embolization Studies also reported need for reoperation after hysterectomy No study out of two addressing such interventions demonstrated benefits associated with transfusion or iron supplementation for anemia after PPH is stabilized Systems level interventions had little effect on reducing the incidence or severity of PPH or the need for transfusion or hysterectomy

CONCLUSIONS The literature addressing management of PPH comprises predominantly studies of poor quality Diagnosis of PPH is subjective and management is urgent often involving rapid and simultaneous initiation of interventions Therefore comparing the severity of PPH and trajectory of care across studies is challenging Further research is needed across all interventions for PPH management

Excerpt from abstract Examining the Impact of Nursing Confidence in Recognizing Postpartum Hemorrhage

Chavonne N. Good, 2020 Postpartum hemorrhage is a life threatening maternal emergency that affects hundreds of women in the United States every year Although contributing to more than one half of all maternal morbidity events in the U S this maternal emergency can be prevented through better recognition and quick response times of postpartum hemorrhage signs and symptoms National organizations dedicated to improving patient outcomes have suggested that by increasing nursing confidence through the use of simulation and online learning environments nursing recognition and response to maternal safety events can be enhanced as well This study sought to determine whether online learning impacts nursing confidence related to the management of postpartum hemorrhage Relationship Between Anemia in Pregnancy and Postpartum Hemorrhage, 2002

Maternal death is a major health issue worldwide Life threatening complications of pregnancy are responsible for nearly three quarters of maternal deaths and hemorrhage alone accounts for 25 percent of those maternal deaths One of most common health problems during pregnancy is anemia The main objective of this study was to examine the relationship between anemia in pregnancy and postpartum hemorrhage The research employed a case control study and the study was conducted at Uthai thani Hospital in Uthai thani province Thailand A total of 250 subjects were selected Cases were subjects with postpartum hemorrhage history which was defined as amount of blood loss more than 500 ml and the controls were subjects without postpartum hemorrhage history Cases were matched with controls according to time of delivery in month and year Fifty subjects were selected as cases group and 200 subjects as controls group Hematocrit level during the third trimester of pregnancy was reviewed together with fourteen others information from the medical records Anemia in pregnancy was considered as Hematocrit level less than 33% in the blood Descriptive statistics bivariate correlation chi square test T test and conditional multiple logistic regressions were performed in data analysis Generally the characteristics of the subjects which was comprised of age educational level occupation gravidity place of ANC frequency of ANC parity type of labor duration of labor oxytocics drug administration baby weight profession of attendant and complications were different between cases and controls group There were some significant positive and negative correlations between the variables There were three factors significantly affecting the occurrence of postpartum hemorrhage at p value 0.05 age OR 5.5 education OR 3.3 and anemia OR 3 Parity OR 2 was significant at p value 0.1 Anemia in pregnancy is one of predisposing factors of postpartum hemorrhage The risk to experience postpartum hemorrhage among anemic pregnant women was 3 times as high as among non anemic pregnant women Proper diet and iron supplementation for pregnant women and encouraging the use of family planning methods were strongly recommended Postpartum
